WATERLAND ADAMANT ON TRANSFERS

No Tears Over Lost Jobs

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria will lose almost 250 jobs through decentralization of the forest service and Forests Minister Tom Waterland has no sympathy for local protesters.

"The function of this government is to provide good administration, not populate the city of Victoria," he said in an interview.

He said he will begin the process of decentralization as soon as possible.

"The number (of transfers) has not yet been decided but it will be less than 300 — it might even be less than 250."

He said forest ministry experts have advised him to transfer out a number under 250 but he has not decided whether he will move more or less than the number suggested.

"All I can say now is that it might be less than 250."

Waterland said he has no time for local protests because he is determined to carry out a policy of decentralization.

"We have 800 people in my ministry working in Victoria — and how many trees are growing in Victoria?"

A number approaching 250 would be moved to various centres across the province, where a further decentralization would take place.

WATERLAND
. . . 'how many trees?'

The forest service currently operates in only six centres and this number would be greatly increased, he said.

"We are planning a full decentralization."

Waterland also criticized the proposal from Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber that the provincial government guarantee a job-for-a-job, transferring an equal number of people in for those who are moved out of Victoria.

"That won't work," Waterland said. "If we started moving people to Victoria from the Lower Mainland, what would the mayor of Vancouver say?"

Waterland said Victoria need not worry about losing status as the capital city.

"Victoria will always be the seat of government but we must be allowed to provide good administration for the province as a whole."

Waterland said he would try to cushion the blow of the transfers as much as possible.

A few of the 800 employees are nearing retirement age, he said, and when they leave the service, their jobs would be replaced in some other city.

This would have the effect of transferring jobs without transferring people.

However, this would apply only to a small number of the approximately 250 jobs involved.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young and Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier have both expressed concern about the payroll loss to Victoria.

Couvelier has asked for a job-for-a-job guarantee from the provincial government while Young has asked the government to provide figures on the net loss to the city.

Young said he was asking the government to provide numbers because of continuing rumors about additional jobs being moved out of the city.

Russians Ready For New Arms Talks

Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS — Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko declared Friday that the Soviet Union would be ready immediately after the signing of a SALT II accord to begin a new round of talks aimed at achieving "a substantial reduction" in nuclear arsenals.

U.S. officials said Gromyko's statement, made only hours before he was scheduled to fly to Washington for a crucial weekend of SALT negotiations, marked the first time the Soviets have publicly agreed that the goal of SALT III should be deep cuts in strategic armaments such as those proposed last year by President Carter.

Gromyko's address to the United Nations General Assembly's special session on disarmament was notably mild in tone, and observers speculated that the Kremlin may be becoming a bit apprehensive over reports of growing congressional pressure on the Carter administration to postpone conclusion of a SALT II accord.

Gromyko, who will be discussing the remaining obstacles to a SALT II agreement in weekend talks with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and possibly President Carter, said he felt "Possibilities exist for resolving the remaining issues . . .

"If we miss this chance, then in certain highly important areas we could reach a point beyond which any possibility of concluding appropriate agreements will be altogether nonexistent," Gromyko said. "Certain types of weapons which are being developed simply do not lend themselves to mutual control over their quantity or qualitative characteristics."

Gromyko added that immediately after signing the agreement which is now being prepared, the Soviet Union would be ready to enter into negotiations which should lead to "a substantial reduction, I repeat reduction" in strategic arms.

Many delegates, including several from the United Staes, felt Gromyko's address was relatively restrained in view of Vice President Walter F. Mondale's sharp criticism of the Soviet Union two days earlier for escalating the arms race.

As expected, the Soviet foreign minister repeated the Kremlin's call for a ban on the neutron warhead that has been developed by the United States, terming it "a particularly vicious and cruel means of mass destruction.

Error Foils Trollers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federal Court turned down on Friday an application by the Pacific Trollers Association to force the federal government to end its closure of the Swiftsure Banks fishery because the injunction application named a non-existent department.

Judge Alex Cattanach said an injunction in the name of Environment Canada Fisheries and Marine would have no effect because fisheries operations come under the federal department of fisheries and environment.

"How can I order an injunction against an officer in Environment Canada Fisheries and Marine when there is no such department?" he asked.

Lawyer Paul Fraser withdrew the injunction application but said later he would be back in court soon.

Snag Still There

HALIFAX (CP) — Canadian and United States negotiators made sufficient progress towards implementation of a reciprocal East Coast fisheries agreement to warrant further meetings July 6 and 7 in Boston, a federal fisheries spokesman, H. Douglas Johnston, said Friday.

Meanwhile, south of the border the U.S.-Canada fisheries dispute was bounced back to cabinet level Friday after more than six hours of talks by negotiators in Washington failed to bring about an agreement.

Details of the U.S. proposal were not disclosed, but it was believed to deal with some increased access by Canadian fishermen to U.S. West Coast salmon waters.

Canada has been pressing for extended access to U.S. West Coast waters as specified in the bilateral 1978 fishing agreement signed earlier this year, but not yet approved by the U.S. Congress.

The agreement said the enlarged salmon-trolling zone would be conditional on Canadian closure of the Swiftsure Bank fishery for conservation purposes beginning in mid-April. Despite U.S. requests for the closure, Canada did not fully close the bank until mid-May.

SLOW MORNING at Swiftsure. When starting time rolled around with no wind, unidentified member of crew of Night Moves decided best bet was to catch quick nap. Record 373 boats in Swiftsure and Juan De Fuca classics waited two hours and 40 minutes before getting off the mark at 11:40 a.m. If forecast of brisk westerlies materializes later, crews will be on the hop with only brief breaks for meals. 'Mesrine' Strikes

DEAUVILLE, France (UPI) — A gunman claiming to be Jacques Mesrine, the dapper convict and ladies' man who staged a spectacular prison break three weeks ago, robbed the elegant Deauville casino of $30,000 early today and escaped with an accomplice in a blaze of gunfire.

Airport Safety To Wait

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seven British Columbia airports which do not meet minimum fire safety standards set by the Ministry of Transport may remain underequipped until new firetrucks are delivered to several major Canadian airports.

Thirteen $300,000 firetrucks were ordered by the federal government five years ago — but the Toronto company building them went bankrupt.

A spokesman for C.D.N. Research and Development Ltd., of Toronto, which now is building the trucks said Friday it may take a year to complete all 13 firetrucks.

The new 60,000-pound firetrucks will go to Canada's major international airports to replace older fire-fighting machinery, which in turn will be passed on to smaller airports.

In Ottawa, a spokesman for the MoT said "the bottom line in all this is cash — and in this period of restraint it is not always forthcoming."

"But we are meeting the requirements as fast as we can with the funds available," the spokesman said. "The first of these new firetrucks is going to Toronto airport. I have no idea about the priorities of the others."

Terrorist Strolls From Airtight Jail

BERLIN (UPI) — Two women terrorists posing as lawyers entered an "escape-proof" jail today, freed one of Germany's most wanted men and casually strolled out with him under the noses of patrolling police.

One police guard taken hostage in the meticulously planned raid at the Moabit prison was/shot in the leg. The terrorists all escaped unharmed.

Police said there were either two or three accomplices involved but there was no confirmation they were all female, as originally reported.

The women, believed to be members of an offshoot of the Baader-Meinhof urban guerrilla band, freed Till Meyer, a 33-year-old convicted terrorist who was being tried on chrges of murder, kidnapping, attempted kidnapping and 10 bank robberies. He was described as one of Germany's most wanted men.

They also had planned to free Andreas Vogel, 22, one of five other defendants on trial with Meyer, according to Juergen Baumann, head of the West Berlin Justice Department.

Baumann said the two women used lawyers' identity cards to get into the prison and timed their raid to coincide with visits by Meyer's and Vogel's real lawyers.

Once inside, the women pulled out pistols and shouted to Meyer and Vogel to leave the unlocked cells where they were conferring with their lawyers.

Meyer ran free but a guard grabbed a pistol from one of the two women and locked himself in the cell with Vogel. He sounded an alarm that alerted guards in the prison but not the police patrols outside.

The two women then took another guard hostage and forced other guards to open a security door that led to an unguarded front door.

"To show they meant business they shot their captive in the leg," Baumann said.

The plot was so carefully planned and prison controls so lax that the two young women then simply strolled out of the prison's main entrance onto a busy thoroughfare under the eyes of police patrols, got into a Volkswagen bus with waiting accomplices and drove off without undue haste.

The bus later was found abandoned not far from the prison.

The prison had been billed as "escape proof" after undergoing a $2 million renovation.

Meyer's and Vogel's real lawyers were taken into custody and questioned to see if they were involved in the plot.

Meyer was on trial on charges of being involved in the 1974 murder of Berlin Judge Gunter von Drenkmann.

DOCK RAMMED, GAS SPURTS

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A British coal carrier rammed an oil company loading dock on the Mobile River, sending about 100,000 gallons of jet fuel, oils and gases spurting out of severed dock pipes, the U.S. Coast Guard said today.

Lieut. Robert Trescott of the coast guard's marine safety division said the shipping industry was shut down for eight kilometres along the river because of the danger of an explosion from the highly volatile jet fuel and gases.

"Because of the muggy weather and the fuel lying low and collecting in pockets, there is some danger of an explosion and fire," he said.

SUNDAY BIBLE PLAY BANNED

By FRANK RUTTER
Times London Bureau

LONDON — A British trade union is trying to ban the Bible on Sunday.

This extraordinary demonstration of union power comes from Equity, the actors' union.

One of Equity's members, stage star Alec McCowen, has memorized the gospel according to St. Mark.

He is currently reciting it — and acting it — at London's Mermaid Theatre, a two-hour performance which critics have termed a tour de force.

He is doing it on Sunday as well as weekdays.

But the show is to move June 20 into a West End theatre, The Comedy.

This requires a new contract between a new impresario and Equity.

Equity, refuses to allow the Sunday performances, says Nicholas Salmon, managing director of H.M. Tennent, the new impresario.

"It is rather ironical," said Salmon with British understatement.

"We had asked for this to be considered a special case, because of the nature of the subject. But they have been adamant."

To make matters more ironical, he continued, Equity has just permitted an exception for two of Britain's most popular comedians, The Two Ronnies, to put on six Sunday performances at the London Palladium.

"It doesn't matter that it's St. Mark's gospel — the point is that it is a Sunday performance," said Monica Foot, speaking for Equity.

"It is true that last Tuesday Equity decided against the application. The whole matter will be reconsidered at next Tuesday's council meeting."

Rail Link Stays but Bennett Rapped

Times News Services

Residents of Fort Nelson threw a party Friday night to celebrate the decision to retain and upgrade B.C. Rail's extension from Fort St. John, but Mayor Andrew Schuck took time off to blast Premier Bill Bennett for "waffling" for five months before making the announcement.

Schuck said that while he was happy with the announcement, the government took too long to make a decision on the rail extension.

Bennett announced on Friday a $35 to $40 million upgrading of the 400-kilometre rail link between Fort Nelson and Fort St. John, despite an earlier royal commission recommendation that the extension be shut down as too costly.

The announcement touched off celebrations in the northeastern B.C. community of 4,000 which had feared loss of jobs and the end of the town without the rail link.

Schuck said when the government tabled the commission recommendation, it created a lot of problems for his community.

He said hotel and apartment construction and homeowner loans were held up awaiting a decision on the rail link.

"I believe the premier (Bennett) was not being entirely frank when he said he needed time to study the over-all transportation system before making a decision," said the mayor.

"Now he's made the decision, but where's the integrated transportation policy? The government plainly was perplexed as to what to do with this extension and was buying time."

Bennett earlier denied that the government had been delaying its decision following the commission's recommendation, saying "it would have been improper" to immediately disregard its suggestions.

He noted that one of the commission's observations "was that too many decisions have been made without full study."

The premier said he expects the federal government to share 50 per cent of the cost, a proposal being discussed in federal-provincial talks on the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline.

The extension is necessary to reinforce government policies of economic expansion and northern development, which are part of the "economic blueprint" of the province, said Bennett.

He added it is also needed to serve the communities of Fort Nelson, Fort St. John and other communities in

Hydro Borrowing Cut

The provincial government cut $250 million from B.C. Hydro and Power Authority's request for authorization to borrow $1 billion for capital projects this year, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Friday.

"We reviewed their borrowing requirements and felt that they could operate within a limit of $750 million," Wolfe said in an interview.

"This is the means by which we are controlling their growth. We also must approve all borrowing by order-in-council."

Wolfe said Hydro had requested authority to borrow $1 billion last year as well, and that the government had chopped that request to $650 million.

He said that Hydro had also reduced its load-growth estimates considerably.

During debate Friday of a bill which would expand Hydro's borrowing powers to $4.9 billion from $4.15 billion, Wolfe outlined where the $750 million will be spent:

—$145 million for the Site One project on the Peace River downstream from the W.A.C. Bennett Dam;

—$115 million for the Seven Mile project on the Pend d'Oreille River for a concrete dam and surface powerhouse and transmission preparation;

—$18 million for the Mica Creek Dam for additional generating unit and transmission lines.

The government also is budgeting $27 million for other generating facilities and $98 million for other additions to transmission facilities.

Transmission substations throughout the province, breaking power down from high voltage to subtransmission and distribution voltage, will cost $52 million, upgrading of distribution circuits to accommodate growth $80 million, and other electric facilities, communication and control, laboratories and service centres $38 million.

A total of $34 million has been allocated for gas facility plant additions, $36 million for passenger transportation equipment and facilities, and $14 million for miscellaneous vehicles.

Wolfe said Hydro's expansion program is planned so that there will be sufficient electric power to meet anticipated demand.

He said the projected demand for electricity increased to 52,340 million kilowatt hours from 25,958 million kilowatt hours for 1978-79.

BONNER FOURTH ON PAY LIST

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro's highest paid employee last year was an engineer. Robert Bonner, the Crown corporation's top dog, was fourth on the salary scale.

Salary lists for Hydro's top executives published today show that A. K. Ansari, an engineer involved with the acceptance, installing and commissioning of equipment, made $59,950 in the year ended March 31, 1977, thanks in great part to a lot of overtime work.

Bonner was paid $47,840. General manager J. N. Olsen got $54,500 — $6,660 more than his boss. Eric Martin, general manager of Hydro's engineering group, received $49,400.

Island Shortage?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Island could face a power shortage by 1982 if the declining value of the Canadian dollar continues to spark export sales in the forest industry, Robert Bonner, chairman of British Columbia Hydro, said Friday.

Bonner said the increase in forest industry activity on the island is adding to the demand for power, which likely will have to be met by laying another underwater electric line from the mainland.

He told a Vancouver Board of Trade luncheon that if current trends continue the island could face a shortage of 170 megawatts within four years. The shortage in terms of projected use would be about 10 per cent, he said.

Bonner said the weakened dollar — which puts export industry in a more favorable position — has resulted in increased optimism for the island's forest industry.

He said there is too little time to develop more power sources on the island and it would probably be necessary to run the cable.

Bonner also said it is his intention to reduce Hydro's debt-to-equity ratio to 85-to-15.

Bennett Rapped on Delay

B.C.'s north which are experiencing a boom.

Bennett said the government had analysed the interim report of the royal commission appointed to study railway affairs and the evidence on which it based its recommendations.

The commission recommended in January that the government close the line as soon as possible to save the province up to $70 million in repair costs during the next five years.

Bennett said the government looked at the commission's recommendation that the trucking industry be used more to transport forest products but found it was not nearly as favorable as rail transit. He said rail would give the forest industry a much greater opportunity to expand.

He said the upgrading does not depend on federal participation but that "should not be misconstrued to indicate the federal government . . . has no obligation."

Bennett said the cost implications of upgrading the extension are "far less than indicated in the interim report," but he hastened to add that he had full confidence in the commission.

Bennett said he has been told by BCR management that it was not too late for upgrading this year and that work on the line can proceed through the summer months.

40% Hike In Aid Requests

The number of requests for assistance and information at Victoria MLA Charles Barber's community service office increased more than 40 per cent in the year ending Feb. 28, statistics released by Barber on Friday show.

Barber said he had 2,897 requests, up from just over 2,000 in the previous year.

Requests for help with employment doubled, as did interventions with unemployment insurance and social assistance matters. There were also increases in Pharmacare complaints, chiefly over cutbacks in service and approved pharmaceuticals.

Landlord and tenant problems, however, declined by almost 60 per cent, which Barber said was the result of the opening of a Rentalsman office in Victoria. In addition there were fewer requests for housing assistance.

Barber said that during the year his office distributed free of charge more than 3,000 lists outlining services for seniors in the community.

The office is staffed by 20 volunteers, trained in advocacy work, and financed partly by government support and partly by the New Democratic Party in Greater Victoria.

Consumers Lousy Lobbyists? Not So, Retorts an Angry CAC

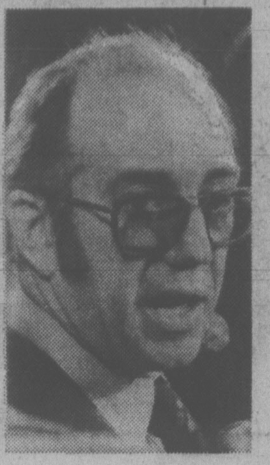
VANCOUVER (CP) — The Consumers Association of Canada reacted angrily Friday to a suggestion that its lacklustre lobbying is to blame for new federal legislation which protects the consumer less than a previous bill.

"I'm just furious," association vice-president Eva Brown said about a remark by Warren Allmand, federal consumer and corporate affairs minister.

During the unveiling of a Credit and Savings Bill, Allmand told a conference at Harrison Hot Springs that the bill will be less biased in favor of the consumer than a predecessor from 1977, a bill which never became law.

Allmand said that although business interests had been lobbying for the new legislation, consumers have done nothing.

"We've spoken to the minister every month on this and we had several high-level discussions with his staff within the last six months," Brown said. "I really take exception to his statement that he hasn't been approached by consumer groups."



ALLMAND
. . . less regulation

Allmand was speaking to the Association of Canadian Financial Corporations when he announced the bill and promised to introduce it in Parliament this fall. He said the 1977 bill was never introduced because consumer advocate groups did not take any interest in it.

This was vehemently denied by Jean Douglas, president of the B.C. branch of the consumers association, and Brown, who represents Canada's best organized grass-roots consumer group.

Douglas insisted that her association lobbied strongly against the Borrowers and Depositors Protection Bill because it didn't want the bill passed in its original state.

It lacked adequate protection for consumers on several fronts, she explained, including removing the ceiling from the Small Loans Act thus opening the door to usurious interest rates, and requiring consumers to prove that an interest rate was too high rather than have the lending company defend it.

Douglas took issue with Allmand's attitude that consumers now are on their own because the government planned to do a lot less regulating with the proposed new Credit and Savings Bill.

" 'De-regulating' is the in-word these days," said Douglas. "It's a spurious thing to say. It pre-supposes that everything is just perfect. I think it's great to appeal to the morals and ethics of the banks, the mortgage companies and credit unions, but if that doesn't work, then regulations may be the only way to go."

"The whole attitude of doing away with regulations and protection is very alarming," said Brown. "It smacks of concessions to big business and just plain running scared because of the economic situation."

Allmand said that the government is "not going to fold its tent and deregulate across the board . . . but there may be an over-dependence on government regulations."

"We believe the first resort of consumers and business when they meet a problem in the market place has to be self-help," he said.

Chef Guilty In Fish Death

KYOTO, Japan (Reuter) — A Kyoto chef was given a suspended eight-month prison sentence Friday in connection with the death of a leading Japanese actor who ate fugu, a fish which is lethal unless certain organs are removed.

Eating fugu is called Japanese roulette in this country. About 30 persons die each year after consuming any one of the 17 varieties found in local waters.

Kabuki actor Mitsugoro Bando died in agony hours after eating fugu at a restaurant where Tadatoshi Kasaoka was chef.

Kasaoka, 38, was convicted of a charge of professional negligence.

The ovaries, liver and other sections of the fugu, or globefish, contain tetrodotoxin, a paralysing substance, and must be carefully removed.

$100,000 Spent For $10

EDMONTON (CP) — A nine-year dispute involving $10 in overtime that has cost taxpayers $100,000 is going before the Federal Court of Canada.

It began in 1969 when customs officer R. G. Tucker, now retired, worked 1½ hours overtime at Edmonton International Airport.

He received overtime pay at the rate of time-and-a-half. But a clause in his union contract — he was a member of the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) — specified that an employee should receive four hours straight pay if the work was unscheduled.

Tucker claimed the work was unscheduled and subsequently filed for the $10. In May, 1972, an adjudicator upheld Tucker's claim.

The federal treasury board tried to have the adjudicator's decision reversed by the public service commission staff relations board. Six years later the board upheld the adjudicator's decision.

The treasury board got in touch with Tucker this week and informed him it will take the case to the federal court, possibly in June.

Edward Done, head of the PSAC, estimates the treasury board has spent $100,000 on the case.

1946 Spy Report Remains a Secret

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's security advisers have ordered that secret documents arising from a 1946 royal commission dealing with Russian spies in Canada be withheld from public view for at least 10 more years. The decision was taken to protect privacy of some individuals.

The prime minister's office said Friday the advisers decided secret material presented to the Teschereau commission when it investigated the Gouzenko spy affair should be returned to the vaults of the National Archives.

The papers were locked there for 30 years and were due to be released in 1976. Government security officers began to review their contents shortly before the release date.

A spokesmen in Prime Minister Trudeau's office confirmed allegations made in the Commons by Conservative Tom Cossitt that Michael Pitfield, secretary to the cabinet, ordered that the papers be kept secret until 1986, when another review will be made.

The commission, headed by former former Supreme Court justice Robert Taschereau, was set up by Prime Minister Mackenzie King after the defection Igor Gouzenko, a Soviet embassy clerk.

Cossitt complained Friday that the papers were returned without public knowledge and demanded that the government release all details on the decision to delay their release.

GARLIC STENCH GROUNDS JETLINER

ZURICH (UPI) — Swissair said Friday it had to ground and take apart one of its DC-10 jetliners because it reeked of garlic.

Passengers on a flight from Zurich to Boston complained about the smell and on arrival the crew found, in the cargo hold, a forgotten can of concentrated garlic oil. The can was leaking.

In Zurich, the aircraft's ventilation system was dismantled and parts cleaned with chemicals but still the smell persisted.

The plane, now back in service, is flying without ventilation, with packets of deodorants strapped under each seat, until time cleans the air.

How Do We Tell?

It's a sad commentary on our times that statements by politicians are rarely taken at face value. We look instinctively for the hidden motive, the real reason, rather than accepting the possibility that noble-sounding declarations may actually spring from noble convictions.

Prime Minister Trudeau does not escape the critical scrutiny; in fact, he is more subject to it than most public figures. So when he announces that Canada is phasing out its aid to Cuba to show disapproval of the activities of Cuban mercenaries in Africa, a question mark leaps up. Can it be that his gesture is designed more to make a favorable impression in the United States than to express righteous moral indignation?

In terms of its multi-million dollar giveaway programs to other countries, Canadian aid to Cuba has not amounted to all that much. The current program, now terminated, expires with roughly $1 million in the kitty.

The handouts may have been on a modest scale, but Canada has enjoyed an unusual relationship with Cuba since Fidel Castro and his Communists took over in 1959. With United States ports closed to Cuban trade, Montreal became a clearing-house between Cuba and the western world. It was a two-way trade, favorable to Canada, which in 1975 had exports to Cuba valued at $226 million, almost one-third of Canada's total exports to Latin America.

Trudeau obviously believes this trade will not be jeopardized by his announcement. He is right. Montreal is important to Cuba in many more ways than as a trading centre.

The prime minister acted less boldly in 1976 when he paid a state visit to Cuba, even though Cuban mercenaries were already in Angola. Robert Stanfield, then leader of the Progressive Conservatives, wondered why he didn't cancel his trip. Trudeau replied that to have done so would have been interpreted by Cuba not only as condemnation of its actions but as "a definite slight and a cooling, if not breaking, of relations."

His about-face raises another question which most Canadians would prefer to ignore. Is it right for a country which preaches certain moral codes to support through trade countries which flout them? Some Canadian churchmen are vocal on the subject, thumping the big corporations which have dealings with governments they consider to be repressive. South Africa and Chile are cases in point.

When it suits him, Trudeau appears to endorse their view. Last December the Canadian government showed its concern over apartheid by cutting off government-backed commercial credits to South Africa and recalling the Canadian trade commissioner and his staff.

South African reaction was bitter. But now we are back in their good books, or almost. They are applauding our prime minister's swipe at Cuba and its mercenaries. Well they might, with the mercenaries on their very doorstep.

The fact remains that not all the whitewash in the world can conceal the truth that Cuba is a Soviet vassal, propped up by Soviet money and a breeding-ground for mercentary troops who can be deployed at will to strike against regimes to which Soviet Communism is hostile.

All the hot air in the world will not conceal the fact that suppression of human liberties, as iron-fisted as any endured in fascist states, prevails in Cuba. There is no free press, no freedom of political expression, and prisoners languish in hellish prisons with no hope of freedom, let alone a fair trial for their misdeeds.

Political expediency makes for strange bedfellows, but let us in on the secret, Mr. Prime Minister. How do we tell the good guys from the bad guys?

A Silver Lining

So the highly touted tall ships race that was to have been a major part of the Captain Cook Bicentennial has now shrunk to a "visit" by two or three of the graceful vessels and a dozen or so smaller ones.

Perhaps Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf can breathe easier. It's unlikely that two visiting ships will generate enough interest to overrun the city with tourists, jam all available accommodation and leave hundreds of campers and visitors stranded every night with no place to stay. No longer need they make plans to park dozens of camper-trucks on school grounds, ask residents to open their private homes as short-term bed-and-breakfast houses.

Does every cloud really have a silver lining?

Community Policing: Wave of the Future?

In a rare display of unanimity, Victoria city council agreed this week to urge its Police Board to conduct a detailed study on the possibility of moving into a whole new concept of policing, known variously as team policing, community policing, zone policing, preventative policing. It's a long way from a feasibility study to implementation, but the chances seem good that, within the next year or so, a pilot project will be begun somewhere in Victoria.

At an informal council meeting held to discuss the idea, Geoff Mortimer, acting chairman of the B.C. Police Commission, described the team approach as "the way policing will go in the future." Already, he noted, it is being implemented in Los Angeles, Calgary, Surrey, North Vancouver, and — the most notable local experiment — Vancouver itself.

As explained by Mortimer, a number of new ideas come together in the entire team policing program: an emphasis on preventing crime through such programs as Neighborhood Watch for homeowners and anti-shoplifting programs for businesses, rather than on solving crime after it happens; much greater involvement by the police in the community; re-allocation of police manpower so many more policemen become generalists doing all sorts of work in a specific neighborhood or zone rather than the current practice of having specialists (traffic, vice, etc.) working out of a central office; more decision-making power given to the zone teams rather than having most decisions made by a central administration.

Most police departments, including Victoria's, are already making small forays into most of these areas. Police Chief Jack Gregory recited an impressive list of preventative, community projects now being undertaken by his seven-member community relations division and told council that his ordinary patrolmen are assigned regularly to the same area of the city so they get to know the streets and some of the people.

The difference in team policing is that the concepts are brought together in a more formalized form and in a larger way. The result, when the concept works well, said Mortimer, is a return to the best sort of policing that used to prevail in small towns before the advent of urbanization and specialization — a sort of policing in which residents of each neighborhood know their "own" policemen, in which the men themselves get to carry most cases through to completion rather than having to give up anything complicated (and, therefore, often the most interesting cases) to specialized squads, in which the policeman again becomes friend and helper to his neighborhood residents instead of only a symbol of law enforcement.

The emotional appeal of the idea, to both the policemen and the public, is undeniable; moreover, there are many sound reasons to believe it should be effective in reducing the incidence of such crimes as breaking-and-entering, shoplifting and vandalism in many neighborhoods.

Yet, as both Mortimer and Gregory pointed out, care must be taken the public expectations are not raised beyond reasonable levels. Community or team policing will not be the panacea to cure all the evils of crime in our society. Indeed, in some areas it may not work well at all.

The old-style small-town policeman functioned well, but in his small town there were not organized criminals using highly sophisticated crime techniques; there was not the easy mobility which enables criminals to move from neighborhood to neighborhood, even from city to city, with impunity. Also, as Mortimer pointed out, community policing demands a community in which to work. In the downtown area, the highest crime-rate area in the city, there is no community; for that matter, there are scarcely any people who live there, only those who come by day to work, by evening to shop, or by night to drink.

The best place for a pilot project, Mortimer said, is not an area already beset with problems, for the real aim of the new concept is to prevent crime from happening in the future, perhaps years into the future, not to deal with immediate urgent problems.

It is, therefore, difficult to evaluate the success of the new approach. Traditionally police success could be evaluated in terms of number of criminals caught, percentages of crime solved. But how can anyone measure how many crimes might have been committed that were not because of the new approach? Or how can anyone measure the improvement in the attitudes of citizens towards their police force and towards law and order generally?

Team policing won't solve all Victoria's crime problems. But it is to be hoped the police board will find it possible to run a pilot project so the citizens can see if the old-time, small-town approach really can work in the 1970s.

A final note: city council deserves many congratulations for the procedures it used in looking into the team policing question. The informal meeting, attended by Mortimer, Gregory and police board members as well as the mayor and aldermen, allowed for questions to be raised and issues discussed in a mature and rational way. Mortimer and Gregory supplied enough background information for all council members to come to an intelligent decision.

How much better than the uninformed political floundering so often seen at council meetings! Perhaps council should look at using the same method to tackle other problems. — B.McL.

W.A. WILSON

Chase Manhattan Impressed

OTTAWA — While Canada's intergovernmental relations inside the country have become as cantankerous as they have been for many years, authorities outside the country appear to be taking a better view of us.

The last issue of Chase Manhattan's influential publication International Finance carried a front page article reviewing favorably the Canadian government's decision to take the action necessary to strengthen the dollar. This is of some importance because a hard-headed commentary on the Canadian economic conditions in the same publication some months ago was widely viewed as among the immediate contributing causes to the initial decline in the currency.

Then at the end of last week The New York Times, one of the four or five most important newspapers in the world, published an editorial with interesting conclusions about this country. The paper's editorial board had come to the conclusion that the separatist forces have passed their peak and that English-speaking Canadians have a better appreciation of French-English problems than they did even a couple of years ago.

Very Influential

These are significant developments for, to a considerable extent, any nation is what its powerful friends think it is. If they believe there are profound weaknesses in its situation, inevitably consequences will flow from this. If they believe it is in basically sound health, the consequences will be more favorable. Between them, the Chase Manhattan Bank and The New York Times influence a good many people.

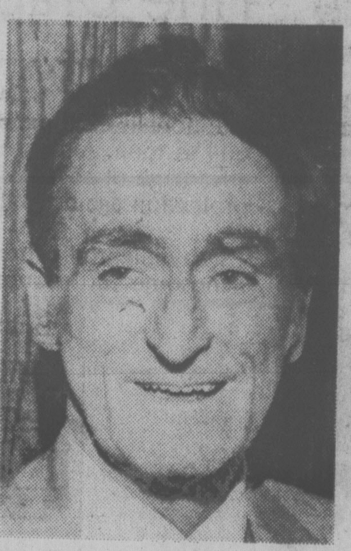
The Chase Manhattan publication is a factual, bi-weekly report on developments around the world and it is the overall effect of the article on Canada that is important.

"Stung by criticism that a 'do-nothing' policy was being followed and convinced that the Canadian dollar has been under-valued the Canadian monetary authorities have embarked on a new 'strong-dollar' course. Following the Bank of Canada's unexpected increase in the discount rate to 8.5 per cent last month, the government has announced a new series of funding packages to increase usable foreign currency reserves . . .

"These steps were occurring just as Canada announced a record $840 million merchandise trade surplus and an increase in official reserves of $610 million in April. The combination of improvement in the external accounts and the new policy resolve by the government has resulted in a major turnaround in the foreign exchange markets . . .

"Smaller foreign borrowing — together with the speculative capital outflows prompted by high inflation, high levels of unemployment and uncertainty over federal-provincial relations — had combined to presage a rather bleak future for the Canadian dollar. The entrance of the federal government into the picture in such a direct manner has been taken as a sign of the government's resolve to face these problems and the exchange markets have responded accordingly."

Like many other observers, The New York Times was favorably impressed by Claude Ryan's election as leader of the Quebec Liberal party and came to the conclusion that "Ryan's selection guarantees that the case for and against independence will be thoroughly aired. Canada's neighbors should not ask for more."



CLAUDE RYAN
. . . impressed New York Times

It seems to me very important that Canadians should realize that this country entered a recovery phase about the middle of last year and that while it is a slow recovery it is there. It is highly unfortunate that renewed growth is not on a steep enough level to eradicate present levels of unemployment for a very considerable period and the temptation to seek shortcuts is correspondingly strong.

The problem is, however, that this country had arrived at a point where it was suffering from some deeply entrenched economic problems. While, like everyone else, I deplore the new row between Ottawa and Quebec, it has seemed to me that the federal government's economic policies were on about the right track if what we are seeking is a long-lasting recovery from our ailments. So, for that matter, have the policies of Quebec and Ontario seemed appropriate for these difficulties.

One may dislike Jacques Parizeau's separatism intensely but the fact remains that he is proving himself to be a good finance minister although perhaps not a very good federal-provincial diplomat. But intergovernmental relations appear to be an area where whatever diplomatic skills we possess as a nation have been sorely eroded.

Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough is no doubt a pretty conservative man for many tastes but when he believes strong medicine is needed he has the right sort of political nerves to follow his convictions. The minority position of the government to which he belongs may have been socially useful in forcing him to back away from the full severity of the increase in medicare premiums he proposed but he has succeeded in reminding everyone in his province how much these services really cost.

Still in Woods

There is no real agreement on the level at which the Canadian dollar would be seriously undervalued but there is something like a consensus that a value of around 90 cents is very helpful to the national economy. It forces up the price of all imported foods — one of the main reasons why inflation is still at its present level — but the disadvantage of this is heavily offset by the improved market that exists for our exports.

During the period of the American recession, before our own experiment with price and wage controls, Canadian labor costs really had risen to uncompetitive levels. That was a time of faltering rationality on the part of everyone, business, governments at all levels and trade unions. The most important effect of devaluation, of far more consequence than somewhat higher prices for imported foodstuffs, is that it effectively returns Canadian labor costs to internationally competitive levels.

The result of this, coupled with the continuing health of the American economy, is the sharp revival in our export trade. Because this is a big, scattered country with a small population, Canadians forget far too frequently that we are a nation of traders and that we cannot maintain our living standards without a massive export trade.

We have been running for some years a massive, unsupportable adverse payments balance. We are not out of the woods yet but the revival of the export trade is a major step in the right direction.

Broken Promises

In December, 1975, the Social Credit party stated that, if elected, they would ban cruel trapping methods in B.C. within three years or sooner if humane traps were developed before that time.

The inference would seem to be that the Social Credit party expected the Federal-Provincial Committee for Humane Trapping (FPCHT) to come up with a humane alternative to the leghold trap by December, 1978. Unfortunately, government committees are notoriously slow and this one is no exception. The FPCHT, set up in September, 1973, to test and develop humane traps has not yet recommended one humane trap and will not do so for another year.

It would seem that commitments to the voting public are easily made at election time and just as easily broken. Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf stated in the legislature on April 26 that there would be no legislation this year to ban cruel trapping methods in B.C. He further stated that banning the leghold trap would simply put 5,000 people into a difficult financial situation.

If there are 5,000 people in B.C. depending on trapping for their income, I wish them well. With a figure of $2 million from wild fur pelts during the 1976-77 trapping season in B.C., we can easily figure out that each trapper is making approximately $400 per year.

You might argue that, to some of our native people in the far north, this could mean a lot to their existence. I would answer that these people number very few as we know that 80 per cent of our trappers are part-time, weekend or hobby trappers. Mr. Bawlf's budget is in the neighborhood of $64 million. Surely, a few dollars could be found to compensate the small number of trappers in real financial need.

What all this really means is that another season of horror will take place for 80,000 squirrels, 48,000 muskrat, 23,000 marten, 17,000 beaver, 5,000 coyotes and thousands more of other animals in our B.C. woods.

And, next year, if there is no humane trap recommended — what then? Another election? Another commitment? — Val Gislason, 1805 Newton Street.

Need New Leader

This weekend the city of Victoria played host to the annual provincial convention of the New Democratic Party. Delegates came from all over the province to discuss and vote on policy that they believe will win the voters to their cause. But the most important decision they made is the election of a party leader. Unfortunately there was no debate on this matter and Dave Barrett was re-elected as party leader. The NDP may have all the noblest intentions but as long as it has Barrett as its leader it will never receive the full support of the many people who want an alternative to the present government.

Barrett went to the electorate in 1975 with the issue of leadership as his main focus. And it was precisely for that reason that the voters did not re-elect a NDP government, for the people of B.C. in their wisdom decided that Bill Bennett would provide better leadership. When Dave Barrett was premier of this province he showed a decided lack of leadership in directing the government. Now the latest issue of Saturday Night magazine contains more damning evidence against Barrett. In a series of articles discussing federal-provincial meetings and the personalities of the people involved the following is stated:

"The departure of Barrett (he never played by the rules and was forever holding things up) . . . has improved both the decision-making and the ambience."

Surely with the impending problems in Confederation and the possibility of a new constitution for Canada re-defining federal and provincial powers, Dave Barrett is not the type of leader the people of B.C. want to represent them at these discussions. And surely the prime minister and the premiers of the other provinces will not appreciate the return of Dave Barrett to the conference tables. Until such time as the NDP has a true "leader" it cannot expect the people of B.C. to consider it seriously as an alternative to the present government. — E. M. Mitchell, 3884 Haro Road.

Not Frivolous

Your paper recently reported comments made last week by Dick Belfit of the Telecommunications Workers Union at the Victoria Labor Council meeting when he called "frivolous and not making any sense" a motion of condemnation against Mayor Mel Couvelier for his remarks and actions on the application by the Rape Relief Centre for funding.

We applaud the action taken by the labor council. If anyone's words have been frivolous lately they are Belfit's and Couvelier's. Rape is not a frivolous crime, however, and unfortunately the actions of Belfit and Couvelier are not without meaning for victims of rape in this city. The Rape Relief Centre provides an invaluable and much needed service and deserves to be supported by everyone — seriously. — D. Butler, Victoria Status of Women Labor Committee.

An Editorial

To help students cope with the likelihood of being unemployed when they graduate, Fanshawe College president James Colvin recommends that community colleges offer courses on the subject. We can see it now . . .

The time is October, 1978. As dawn creeps over the horizon, vague human shapes appear at the gates of the schoolyard. Tired, frustrated, they mill about in the shadows of the wrought-iron fence, waiting for the supervisor to make his daily pilgrimage from the low brick community college.

The wretched figures are enrolled in Jobless 101, established in September in conjunction with Aimlessness 140 and Queueing 178. They recall as though it were yesterday the words of James Colvin — "We're going to have to train people to be unemployed" — and the rash of colleges which raced to offer such a course. They recall the day the pinball machines were moved into the home room to simulate a non-working environment. They remember when the teachers took away their textbooks and handed them a mimeographed sheet of the day's want ads.

Now, scarcely three weeks into the fall session, they have found themselves laid off by the school. The word came suddenly, halfway through the class on "filling out unemployment insurance forms". They were forced out on to the street, ordered to show up at 8 a.m. each day to win their credit in the course.

This morning, like every other morning, they wait in silence. The supervisor steps into the yard from the college; he makes his way to the gate. A sea of hands reaches toward him and a hundred eyes moisten in anticipation.

"I'm sorry," he barks. "No homework for anyone today."

McGill: A Threatened University

By HARVEY SCHACHTER
Toronto Star

MONTREAL — McGill, the university that proudly calls itself the Harvard of the north, is in serious trouble.

The fate of Quebec's most important English-language university is inextricably tied to the fate of Quebec's wary and embattled anglophone community.

Each is only as strong as the other.

And with the anglophones beginning to drift away from a province governed by the separatist Parti Quebecois, the university's strength is eroding.

Losing rank

McGill has long prided itself on its international breadth of vision and on the fact that it has been able to draw top professors — and students — from outside Canada. But increasingly the university is finding itself preoccupied with one main reality: Quebec.

The intake of students from outside Quebec has been falling, recruitment of staff from outside is increasingly difficult, and if that doesn't necessarily mean the university will die — as some doomsayers predict — it might well mean that McGill will no longer rank with the University of Toronto at the top of the list of Canadian Educational Institutions.

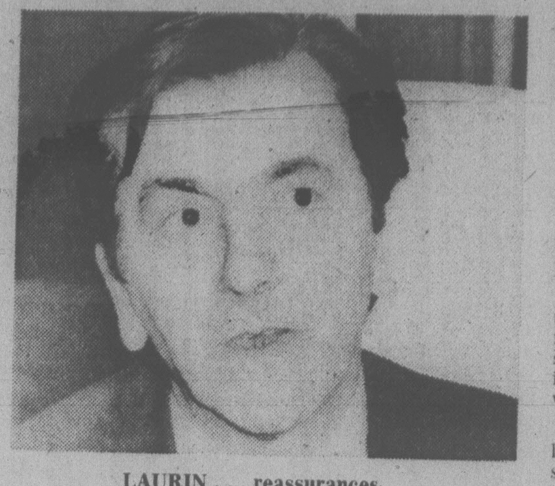
Even principal Robert Bell — normally the university's biggest booster — is openly worried. When asked if he's optimistic about McGill's future, the best he could manage was a rather weak: "I'm not unduly pessimistic."

George Kopp, a perceptive cartoonist for the student newspaper who now works for the Students' Society, is even more frank.

"The English-language community is drying up. For McGill to survive they'll have to get people from outside the province. If the government stops that — and right now it looks like its language legislation will — it's bye-bye McGill as we know it."

Ironically, while McGill's future is in jeopardy no one is openly attacking it. Nine years ago some 7,000 French-Canadians marched on the university with banners and slogans calling for it to become a French university. Today there are no such calls.

The Parti Quebecois government has been unexpectedly supportive. Premier Rene Levesque has conducted his meetings with university officials entirely in English, for example, while former premier Robert Bourassa always made sure they began in the official working language of the province, French, before later switching to English.



LAURIN . . . reassurances

The only strong attack on the university by Levesque — because half its dentistry graduates are leaving the province — has been balanced by reassurance from the minister of cultural development, Camille Laurin, that "the Parti Quebecois has no intention whatsoever of asphyxiating McGill's evolution, whether directly or indirectly."

Even the separatist government's most detested piece of legislation in the anglophone community is, on the surface, an improvement for McGill from the Bourassa government's equivalent.

Under the current language legislation, McGill is no longer defined as a part of the public service, which would require it to handle all its correspondence and official record-keeping in French.

But the government's separatist thrust may yet do irreparable damage to the university — whether Laurin intends it or not.

As Kopp notes, the English community is drying up. Nobody has definite statistics, but everyone knows English friends who have left, or are planning to leave when the opportunity arises. And few English appear to be entering the province, scared off by the requirement that their children be educated in French (although McGill officials stress that there is a three-year exemption for temporary residents, and a three-year further extension, which might take newcomers well beyond the life of the present government).

All that means there may not be enough students for the university to continue as at present. In its brief on the language legislation, the univesity noted that projections indicate the English-language school system in Quebec, from which McGill gets 60 per cent of its students, will be more than halved by 1986.

Sent letters

"A university such as McGill with McGill's present commitment could not operate successfully on a continually shrinking English-speaking population base, especially if the flow of students and faculty from outside Quebec also is restricted by consequences of the bill, as it inevitably will be," the university warned.

"The threat to McGill, then, is real."

Already, admissions from the rest of Canada to the first year of under-graduate programs has fallen to 254 from 346 in the last two years, a drop of 26 per cent. American student admissions fell to 209 from 317, or 34 per cent.

And overseas students — even before the imposition for next year of a differential fee similar to the one in Ontario, tripling the cost of tuition — dropped to 103 from 166, or 38 per cent.

Those figures don't include the post-graduate faculty and medicine — where the bulk of students come — but the fear is the trend will hit there as well.

The university even sent a letter to all its graduates outside Quebec this year trying to calm them down about the Quebec situation and reassuring them that McGill still remained an English-speaking university — hoping that message might be carried to prospective students.

Terry Reed, student president, and an American who has spent five enjoyable years at the university, says he wouldn't come to McGill if he were starting out as a student today.

"In five years I've seen an amazing degree of change in the receptivity to foreigners here in Quebec. The university will become more parochial — no doubt about that. You need every change in faculty or department (for a foreign student) approved by the provincial government now. You need to register two weeks before coming and leaving. There's the differential fee," he says.

"I don't want to stay here. Most of my anglophone friends don't either. The situation is inhospitable to young anglophones, and there's a lot of anguish here."

McGill, which has a current enrolment of 17,000, has had many illustrious professors through the years, including Ernest Rutherford, who discovered two forms of radiation; humorist-political economist Stephen Leacock; novelist Hugh MacLennan; neurosurgeon Wilder Penfield; and psychologist Donald Hebb.

Among its famous former students are composer Burt Bacharach, choreographer Brian MacDonald, former deputy minister of finance Simon Reisman, U.S. national security adviser Zbigniew Brezinski, and Ontario Liberal Leader Stuart Smith.

In the early 1960s the university noted honestly in a brief to a government commission that it has little contact with the neighboring French-language university on the other side of Montreal's Mount Royal:

"Between McGill and the University of Montreal there are few exchanges; their relations are literally, as well as figuratively, ultramontane . . . At a recent scientific congress at the Univesity of Montreal, not one of 40 McGill graduate students attending had ever previously set foot in the main buildings on Mount Royal Boulevard."

That too has changed. Many staff members are involved in co-operative ventures with their colleagues at French universities. There's even a law course given on alternate days at McGill and the University of Montreal — with students from both universities in the class.

But there are still some who feel McGill has a long way to go before it is properly integrated in the province, and its tendency is still to seek links with Harvard and Princeton, rather than with the University of Quebec and Laval University.

A look at car licence plates indicates just how far the university must go. This year Quebec drivers get only one licence plate from the province, and cars are now carrying personalized plates on the front bumper emblazoned with everything from first names to pet interests.

In downtown Montreal, many cars proudly carry some version of the fleur-de-lis, the Quebec symbol. At McGill, you can't find a single such plate. Instead it's Canadian flags, or the word McGill.

As always, the university is apart.

In the past, that never mattered.

The Progressive

This may be the only magazine in America that does not regularly run the Mobil Oil Corporation's institutional advertisements. They're here, they're there, they're everywhere except in The Progressive — those chatty, folksy, cutesy Mobil ads extolling, in no particular order, the triumphs of "free enterprise," the virtues of the oil industry, and the boundless devotion to the public weal of Mobil Oil.

It isn't that The Progressive has nobly refused to publish Mobil's homespun homilies; we haven't been afforded the opportunity. Once in a rare while a corporate ad comes our way from the likes of General Motors or DuPont or AT&T. Invariably, these elicit protests from a few subscribers — but we believe The Progressive's readers are mature and sophisticated citizens who will not sustain irreparable harm if they are exposed to corporate propaganda. And anyway, we can use the money.

But Mobil's sermonettes are in a class by themselves. I have at hand a full-page tract that appeared recently in all those other magazines — the second ad in a series called "Business and the Rational Mind." This one is headed "Doughnut-watching" (I warned you they were cute) and it begins:

"When it comes to evaluating the performance of the American economic system, it's hard to get some people to look at the substance. They get so hung up on shortcomings that they fail to discern accomplishments. Instead of comprehending the doughnut, they become fixated on the hole."

Well now, our minds may not be as rational as Mobil's, but we can tell that when they talk about "some people," they mean us. We're hole-watchers from way back, here at The Progressive.

Mobil is ecstatic about our "wondrously productive" economy, but we ask why that economy can't provide our people with full employment, or a rational transportation system, or decent housing, or adequate medical care at an affordable price. And we contend that productivity based largely on the squandering of our resources, the pollution of our environment, the jeopardizing of workers' health and safety, the merchandizing of schlock, and the manufacture of weaponry, isn't really all that wondrous.

Mobil, understandably, prefers to keep its eye on the doughnut. We hole-watchers, the ad asserts, "focus disproportionately on the short-term malfunctions that punctuate the system's long-term performance." It depends, I suppose, on your point of view. Perhaps our preoccupation with those "short-term malfunctions" has something to do with the fact that we are mortal; the short term is the only term we get. Corporations, on the other hand, go on forever, they can afford to wait — and to outwait us.

Not all of Mobil's message is quite as clear. The following is downright baffling:

"Many elitists seem to feel that in the long run our country will be better off if the decisions are made by a select few rather than by the masses of people. Since our economic system is essentially egalitarian in its thrust, elitists often appear to fear and distrust it."

Does Mobil know something we don't know? We harbor the impression that the decisions are made by a "select few." Perhaps we mislaid the ballots by which Mobil asked "the masses of people" to decide on its investment policies, its exploration program, its reserves, its prices, and its profits. Oh yes, and its advertising. Whatever we fear and distrust about our economic system — Mobil's got us dead rights there — it is not its "egalitarian thrust."

Finally, Mobil chides, "At least part of the carping at our economic system is sheer intellectual faddism; it's easier to criticize . . ." That's where Mobil is dead wrong; it would be easier by far to climb on board. Our hunch is that if we were content to keep our eye on the doughnut, Mobil and its sister corporations would show their appreciation by sending lots of advertising our way. Then we would be spared the trouble of filling these pages with sheer intellectual faddism.

But we are hole-watchers — "fixated," as they say at Mobil Oil. Incidentally, have you ever noticed the "o" in Mobil's ubiquitous corporate logo?

Mobil

It looks like a doughnut. With a large hole.

Three Bird Books For Price of One

The tail end of May seems like a particularly inappropriate time to be discussing books and reading, but when the books are about birds and the reading designed to get you outdoors looking at said birds, what further justification is needed.

The books I have in mind have an added advantage; they're not expensive. Purchase of all three will still leave enough change from $10 for a plate of chips and two pieces of fish and, at today's prices, that's old-fashioned purchasing power.

Let's begin with Where to Find Birds in British Columbia. David Mark of New Westminster did the leg-work in compiling this guide to 48 of the top birding places in the province. But he had help — 16 naturalists from all over B.C. who contributed their knowledge of their local birding scene.

Mark and his confreres have divided the province into eight birding regions, with 14 entries going to the Vancouver area, eight each to Vancouver Island and Kootenays, seven to the Okanagan, five to the Peace River country, four to the Kamloops-Sushwap area, two to the Cariboo and none to the north coast. The compilers hope that the lack of a representative from the latter bird-rich area will be corrected in future issues of the book.

Each birding spot is described briefly, its interesting birds listed, and information on how to find it given. Also included is an up-to-date checklist of the birds of British Columbia and a list of the most "sought-after" species that visiting birders want to see, and where they can be found.

A friend of mine suggested that the $3 price tag for Where to Find Birds in British Columbia was a little steep, but when you think of what you can save by heeding the government's plea for a stay-at-home vacation this year and using this book as a guide, the $3 doesn't sound too bad.

Where To Find Birds in British Columbia is available from Kestrel Press, Box 2054, New Westminster, V3L 5A3.

Book two on the list, a product of the British Columbia Provincial Museum's publication program, is the latest of a series on British Columbia birds begun in 1954 by Charles J. Guiguet, Curator of Birds and Mammals at that venerable institution. This one — on goatsuckers, hummingbirds, swifts and swallows — follows Guiguet's now-familiar pattern of describing first the bird, then its range, voice, nesting, food and migration.

Sixteen species are described in detail with shorter notes on two rarities, one — Costa's Hummingbird, which was seen in Victoria in 1974 — the other, Allen's Hummingbird, whose possible presence here is currently a contentious matter among local birdwatchers.

Goatsuckers, Hummingbirds, Swifts and Swallows is number 37 of the Museum's Handbook series and costs $1.

The last book on my list is also a product of the Provincial Museum, this one the work of three authors — David F. Hatler, R. Wayne Campbell and Adrian Dorst — who combined several years of observations of birds along the west coast to produce Birds of Pacific Rim National Park. And those of you who haven't yet seen our west-coast national park, Birds of Pacific Rim National Park is likely to make you want to rectify that omission post-haste.

Profuse with maps and drawings — by Keith Taylor who, incidentally, also illustrated the previous book — and photographs by the authors, Birds of Pacific Rim National Park describes the seasonal occurrence and distribution of the 247 species of birds recorded in and near the Park up to the end of 1977.

Of particular interest will be the 10 transects described so that any birder will be able to walk in the steps of the authors, make his or her own records, and compare theirs with those in the book.

Birds of Pacific Rim National Park is probably one of the best regional lists yet to appear on British Columbia birds and, at $3 a copy, should be in the library of anyone justifying the name birdwatchers.

U.S. Deposits Backed by Mark

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Investors who want to safeguard their money against any further weaknesses in the U.S. dollar now can buy certificates of deposit issued in the United States by a West German bank.

The New York branch of Deutsche Genoosenschaftsbank this week introduced a West German mark-denominated certificate of deposit (CD) — the first time such a foreign currency-denominated CD originating in the United States is being offered.

Bankers said they expect other banks to keep a close watch on how the CD fares.

Deutsche Genoosenschaftsbank said it is issuing the certificates in minimum denominations of 250,000 marks (about $120,000) with maturities ranging from 30 to 360 days.

It said the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers will maintain a market in this new security, which bankers said would allow investors to trade in these issues.

A spokesman for the bank, which serves as a central bank for the West German co-operative banking system, said its CD rates are based on Euromark rates, less New York state's five per cent reserve requirement.

The bank plans to use its CD as an alternative funding source in its overall funding concept, but the spokesman declined to disclose the amount of the initial issue.

Bankers said they believe primary interest in the certificates would come from individuals or businesses seeking to hedge against further weaknesses in the dollar.

While hedging now can be accomplished by dealing in the currency futures market or trading forwards, the CD would have the added benefit in that they pay interest during the period they are being held.

General Foods

General Foods Corp., the world's largest manufacturer of packaged food, reported net earnings of $169.5 million, or $3.40 a share, for the 1978 fiscal year which ended April 1.

Net earnings declined from the $177.4 million recorded in fiscal 1977, and earnings a share were down 16 cents from last year.

Net sales for fiscal 1978 reached $5.4 billion, an increase of 9.5 per cent over the $4.9 billion reported in 1977.

The corporation, headquartered in White Plains, N.Y., attributes the decline in earnings to falling sales volume in its coffee operations.

"Results of our coffee business more than offset the gains made in other areas," said James Ferguson, chairman and chief executive officer "Grocery coffee volumes during the first half of the year were far below expectations and while they improved in the final six months of the year, profit margins continued to be under pressure."

K-Tel Int.

K-Tel International Inc., reported sharply improved sales and net income for the nine-month period ended March 31.

K-Tel president Philip Kives of Winnipeg said sales totalled $106.7 million and net income was $3.4 million for the first three-quarters of the fiscal year. Those figures compare with sales of $90.6 million and net income of $814,000 for the same period last year.

Natural Gas Users Lose on Tax Decision

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia natural gas customers will be the ultimate losers in a National Energy Board decision allowing Westcoast Transmission Co. to increase its depreciation and income tax allowances, the chairman of the B.C. Petroleum Corp. said Friday.

George Lechner was commenting on the NEB ruling announced earlier this week, which the corporation estimated will cost gas customers another $20 a year each.

The three major utilities which buy natural gas from Westcoast — B.C. Hydro, Inland Natural Gas Co., and Pacific Natural Gas Co. — will be charged more for their gas.

The increase will be the second this year for Greater Vancouver residential customers, who were hit with a 10-per-cent price increase on March 1. There was also a 16-per-cent hike on March 1, 1977.

The latest increase results from Westcoast's application to the NEB to change its income tax accounting system. It allows Westcoast to collect income tax now by charging its customers more for future tax payments.

6 Years In Jail For Killing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Esko Turenen, 47, of Vancouver, was sentenced in provincial court Friday to six years in prison for shooting a man at a drinking party last December.

In passing sentence, Judge A. D. Beirnes said he was taking into account the involvement of liquor in the incident and that a dispute had arisen between Turenen and the victim over Turenen's girl friend.

The judge noted that Turenen had 26 previous convictions, including 10 involving violence.

Turenen pleaded guilty Feb. 21 to manslaughter in the shooting of Oiva Hietiemies, 52, in the apartment of his girl friend, Daisy May Barnes, 29.

The frozen body of Hietiemies was found stuffed in the trunk of a car three days after the Dec. 6 shooting. Turenen had been stopped by police the night of the shooting, had his driver's licence suspended and had left his car.

Police later returned to the vehicle and found the body.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Three people charged with a May 8 holdup of a cab driver were committed for higher court trial by Judge William Ostler in Victoria provincial court Friday.

Kathryn Eileen Piercy, 23, and Frank Woodrow Richards, 31, both of 2211 Shelbourne, and Delores Isobel Granfield, 23, of 1843 Island Highway, were charged with robbery with violence in connection with a Colwood incident in which Shingara Sunner, a driver with C & C Taxi, was robbed of approximately $60.

Following a day-long preliminary hearing Friday, Ostler ordered the two women to stand trial in a higher court and committed Richards, who was denied bail April 15 on the charge, to trial. All three elected trial by judge without jury when they appeared April 15.

An 18-year-old who pleaded guilty to possession of $1,500 worth of stolen stereo equipment was sentenced by Judge Harold Alder to 30 days in jail.

After defence-lawyer Brian MacKenzie entered the guilty plea to the possession charge on behalf of Patrick John McFadden, 1120 McClure, crown counsel Don Laughton withrew a charge of breaking and entering.

Laughton said that an apartment was broken into and the stereo equipment taken. On May 14, Victoria city police went to a Rockland Avenue address and recovered two speakers from the break-in. Laughton said police then went to McFadden, who led them to a receiver which was buried in a compost heap in his backyard.

Alder also placed McFadden on six months probation.

A 42-year-old man was fined $500 for possession of a stolen rubber raft which he decided not to return after he learned the owners had it insured and would not lose money because of it.

Raymond Sigfried Gokkes, 310 St. Lawrence, entered the guilty plea and Laughton told the court Zodiac Marine Ltd., 1208 Wharf, reported the loss of a rubber raft. An employee of Zodiac noticed Gokkes operating a similar vessel a few days earlier near Capital Iron, Laughton continued.

MacKenzie, who also defended Gokkes, said his client was on friendly terms with Zodiac management and had advised them of the fact. However, MacKenzie said, Gokkes decided to keep it when he learned the raft was insured and Zodiac would not suffer a loss. MacKenzie also said that Gokkes decided he could use it for fishing.

After rejecting MacKenzie's application for a discharge, Alder levied the fine.

Ian Lester MacDonald, 21, of 800 Claremont, pleaded guilty to theft under $200 and was fined $200.

MacDonald was originally charged with breaking and entering but Laughton accepted the plea to the less-serious charge.

Court was informed MacDonald and a companion were spotted running out of a warehouse at Labatt's Brewery, 1921 Government, at about 2.25 a.m. May 19 by maintenance workers. MacDonald was in possession of two cases of beer, Laughton said, but dropped them when the workers shouted at them. The pair were caught by the workers when the two ran into a dead-end blocked by an iron fence.

Defence-lawyer MacKenzie said the two men had been at a local pub and cabaret prior to the incident and decided to go in when they found the front gate to the brewery open. He said it was more in the nature of a prank than a break-in because the pair were shouting and laughing when they were noticed by the employees.

Alta. Oilmen Tight-Lipped

CALGARY (CP) — The national energy board had little luck in three days of hearings in prying the secrets of West Pembina from tight-lipped oilmen.

The area in west-central Alberta, site of the most significant oil strikes in 10 years in this oil-rich province, drew the interest of board officials as they opened their annual oil supply-and-demand hearings.

But all they got was a range of figures indicating the area may contain anywhere from 500 million to 1.5 billion barrels of oil.

From most of the companies involved in the Pembina exploration, the board heard only that they were not in a position to give an over-all assessment at this point.

Top officials of the energy board said they understood the reluctance of the oil firms since they may not have purchased all the Pembina acreage in which they are interested. A slip of the tongue could cost a company millions of dollars.

The firmest forecast the board received on Pembina came from Ashland Oil Canada Ltd. About 750 million barrels of oil might be recovered from the field, the company said. Production in 1983 could amount to 137,000 barrels a day, about 10 per cent of conventional oil production.

But when A. B. Bristow, president of Chevron Standard Ltd., the first company that struck oil in the Pembina field, appeared before the board Friday, he steered clear of any over-all assessment.

"I will say the numbers I have seen may be realistic, but I can't sanction them," Bristow told board chairman Jack Stabback.

Stabback said the figures provided by others show a "not insignificant amount of oil" and it was important for the board to get a reading on what reserves may be available.

But the chairman said later he understood the problems faced by the companies as they jockeyed for position in the promising new oil play.

Officials of the Alberta energy resources conservation board said Pembina contains about 500 million barrels of recoverable oil.

Que.-Ottawa Tax Dispute: It's Back to Square One

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau went back to square one Friday in proposing a solution to the current sales tax debate between Quebec and Ottawa.

The plan to have Ottawa compensate Quebec for a reduction in provincial sales taxes is one that had been proposed by federal Finance Minister Jean Chretien in the days preceding his controversial April 10 budget.

"The federal government would reduce its income taxes for Quebecers while the Quebec government would increase its income tax by the matching amount," Parizeau said.

"But the federal government would continue to collect the same amount from the taxpayers and would transfer to the Quebec government the taxes it collected in the latter's place."

It boils down to Ottawa lowering its taxes on paper while collecting the same amounts as it does now, while Quebec would increase its taxes on paper, with the increase coming in a transfer from Ottawa.

The hitch is Chretien's demand that Quebec reduce its eight-per-cent retail sales tax across the board by three per cent for six months.

In return for compliance with that plan, Ottawa said in April it was prepared to compensate Quebec for two-thirds of the lost revenue, or $225 million.

Two days after the April 10 federal budget speech the Quebec government countered by abolishing the full retail sales tax, but only on clothing, furniture, textiles and shoes for the 1978-1979 fiscal year.

In addition the eight-per-cent tax on hotel rooms was abolished permanently in Parizeau's provincial budget April 18.

Quebec insisted on getting the $225 million in compensation from Ottawa as originally promised, but Chretien refused on the grounds that the sales tax cuts did not meet his requirements.

Quebec maintained that the Parizeau tax cuts were equal in value to those proposed by Ottawa, but Chretien pressed for some form of across-the-board tax reduction.

In a "final" offer, Chretien said he would give Quebec only $40 million in compensation. But legislation was introduced two weeks ago in Ottawa to compensate Quebec taxpayers directly by means of individual $85 cheques from the federal government.

WOMEN CONSIDERED

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The ministry of national defence is considering allowing women to be admitted to military colleges, Defence Minister Barney Danson said Friday.

He said a national defence advisory council is studying the role of women in the Canadian Forces and the possibility of their enrolment in military colleges.

Vets' Aid Promised

OTTAWA (CP) — Disabled veterans' pensions will be increased by up to $310 a year under a bill introduced in the Commons Friday by Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald.

However, Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen made it clear the bill will not get the immediate passage requested by opposition MPs.

The bill, which is supposed to come into effect July 1, would increase pensions for totally disabled veterans to $7,471 a year from $7,160. This increase is in addition to automatic pension raises tied to consumer price increases.

NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles, a long-time campaigner for increased veterans' pensions, and Conservative House Leader Walter Baker said earlier this month that they would agree to pass the bill in one day. Knowles said passage could take as little as a half-hour.

MacEachen said he did not know when the government would proceed with the veterans' pensions bill. He said he would not interrupt second-reading debate on a bill to implement measures contained in the April 10 budget to bring in any other legislation.

$40,800 Tab For New Steps

OTTAWA (CP) — Stone steps leading to Parliament Hill, one of six entrances to the grounds, are being rebuilt. The cost? $40,800.

A public works official said Friday the new steps will be built of Indiana and Nepean limestone by Brune Construction of Ottawa during the next six weeks.

The steps being rebuilt have "been there forever" the official said, and have deteriorted from use and weather.

While the work is being done, the contractor has built temporary wooden stairs beside the stone steps. To build the temporary steps, the workmen have had to cut through a cast-iron fence. That has added to the cost of the project.

Public works decided to build the temporary steps so those visiting the Hill would not have to walk the 100 metres or so to the nearest alternate entrance.

RETARDED OFFENDERS IGNORED?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ykes Huggins, a New Westminster police detective, says the provincial government's containment program for young offenders is ignoring a monstrous problem in not handling marginally retarded offenders.

Huggins, who described himself as a "street cop," was speaking to a workshop at the British Columbia Corrections Association three-day conference.

He said police officers deal with many offences committed by youths often are marginally retarded and illiterate, even though they advance through the school system.

These youths cannot cope with society, he said, and vent their frustrations in terms of assaults, arsons and break-ins.

"We are doing nothing for these adolescents; there's no place that will accept a retarded boy with a history of arson." Huggins said.

Bob Hagman of the Willingdon Youth Detention Centre said statements that the government's containment program had been used as a dumping ground for unwanted children are untrue.

Of the 44 children committed to containment centres, he said, probably eight should not have been.

Referring to a recent B.C. Supreme Court decision which ruled that the provincial government had overstepped its powers in setting up the containment program, Hagman said the government could choose to continue committing children by renaming the centres industrial schools.

Fires Fought From Air

Air tankers were called out for the first time this season to fight forest fires in the Kamloops, Cariboo and Prince George districts this week, the Ministry of Forests said.

The ministry said in its weekly report that 60 new fires broke out this week, bringing the total for the year to 198 compared with 297 during the same period last year.

There are 47 fires still burning throughout the province, the ministry said, and the hazard ranges from low to moderate.

FORM SOUGHT ON HOME SALES

The provincial government has asked realtors to devise a voluntary disclosure statement to protect home-buyers, the president-elect of the B.C. Real Estate Association said today.

Dennis O'Leary of Coastland Realty, Campbell River, said the government wants the industry to prepare a form which would list any problems or defects in a house offered for sale.

The form would be signed by the home-seller and would act like a warranty.

The government has asked the industry to introduce the forms on a voluntary basis, O'Leary said in a press release following his election.

O'Leary said he will advise the government the form should be informative but not too technical for the average home owner to fill out.

"The minister of consumer and corporate affairs, Rafe Mair, has made his views quite clear that home owners must begin to accept a great deal more responsibility in the sale of their property," he said.

"This voluntary disclosure statement is a very positive step in that direction."

Five-Year Railcar Lack Seen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gary Dewar, director of the Alberta Wheat Pool in Vancouver, said Friday that at the present rate of railcar production, it will be five years before railways are able to meet grain producers' demand for cars.

Dewar said the wheat pool is forced to write off Friday as a work day because the railways run out of cars on Thursday. The cars are available again Saturday but the pools are forced to pay workers double time to load that day, he said.

Dewar said West Coast grain loading terminals will not be able to catch up on wheat deliveries which are supposed to be made before July 31, the end of the current crop year.

As of April, there were about 13,319 Canadian National Railways, CP Rail and Government of Canada cars available for moving export grain. The Canadian Wheat Board says the figure will decline to 9,979 vehicles by late 1979, and to 8,124 cars in 1980, unless remedial action is taken.

The wheat board has asked the government to buy another 4,000 boxcars to stave off a transportation crisis. The request has been criticized by Justice Emmett Hall, who headed a federal commission of inquiry into grain handling and transportation.

Hall says his commission found no requirement for extra cars and suggested that any additional order for government rolling stock would be just a means for transferring taxpayer funds to Eastern Canadian manufacturers.

Meanwhile, a meeting held recently by the Interstate Commerce Commission in Portland, Ore., was told that on any given day recently, Canadian and U.S. rail carriers have been short an average of 63,000 cars of all types.

Gerry Bennett, transportation manager for the Council of Forest Industries of B.C., said that the current shortage of lumber cars is particularly bad. He estimated that between 2,500 and 3,000 carloads of lumber now are stranded in B.C. because of inadequate car supply.

Perspectives and Prejudices

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

I like the story about the young mother shopping for a gift for her small son. A clerk shows her a curious-looking toy which seems merely a jumble of bits and pieces. She asks him, "But isn't this rather complicated for a small child?" "It's an educational toy, madam'' replies the clerk rather haughtily. "Educational?'' asks the puzzled mother. ''Yes, madam. It is designed to help the child adjust to living in today's world. Any way he puts it together is wrong!''

Life does present itself to us as a bewildering jumble of bits and pieces. Conflicting and competing demands and appeals and compulsions and threats tend to make us a generation of fragmented personalities. T. S. Eliot expressed our predicament in this way:

> "O wretched generation of > enlightened men,
> Betrayed in the mazes of > your ingenuities."

We are an over-organized, over-stimulated, over-manipulated generation. We complain about failures in communication—but in many ways we are excessively communicated with and communicated at, assaulted by incessant stimulation and incessant suggestion.

We all feel the need for something firm and fixed around which we can sort out and organize the bits and pieces of our lives. In this need, and in the anguish to which its frustration gives rise, is one of the roots of the fanaticisms which flourish in our society—political and religious and cultural.

A significant factor in the appeal of communism is in the central core of meaning and purpose it provides for those devoted to it, a core around which their lives can be organized. One of the secrets of Adolf Hitler's success was in the skill with which he manipulated and exploited this need. And the deep yearning for a central core in life explains to an appreciable extent the appeal and the success of religious and quasi-religious fanaticisms in our society.

Much of the restlessness of the young today—restlessness which often expresses itself in radical, sometimes destructive, forms—is a response to the shattering confusions engendered by the excessive and bewilderingly various stimulations and threats which strike them as they come into adulthood. We who came into adulthood 30 and 40 years ago were not subjected to the same intensity and complexity of stimulation and threat.

Faith—as it is understood in the Bible, as it expressed in the Jewish and Christian heritages—can provide a way of sorting out life's bits and pieces and developing them into patterns of meaning and purpose around awareness of a dimension of our human existence that is above and beyond the here and now, the dimension in which God is the final reality.

Biblical faith does not provide all the answers for confused, harassed men and women today—but it can provide them with a firm core around which they can sort out and find meaning in the bits and pieces of their lives.

Bishop claims people losing individuality

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — Most Rev. Paul F. Reding, Roman Catholic Bishop of the Hamilton diocese, told a gathering of Knights of Columbus members that people are losing their individuality.

"We in the seventies are packaged people and we appear to like it," the bishop said. "We like our packaged homes, our packaged hobbies, our packaged reading and our packaged values."

People should learn to stand up for a cause, to stick out their necks occasionally and say no when the rest of the crowd says yes, Bishop Reding said.

Only shell remains of fire-damaged All Saints Church

Island church fate pending

All Saints Anglican Church, Chemainus Road, Westholme, may be rebuilt with insurance money.

The 98-year-old church, built on the banks of the Chemainus River by pioneers, was gutted last Saturday in a fire believed to be the work of an arsonist.

The fire is thought to have been started just inside the front entrance doors and was out of control by the time the Chemainus volunteer fire department could arrive at the scene.

Fire chief Dick Stanton said, "the flames were through the roof when we arrived." Twenty-seven men, three pumper trucks, one rescue truck and a tank truck from the Crofton volunteer fire department fought the blaze. There were no fire hydrants available but water was pumped from the nearby Chemainus River.

Anglican minister Rev. Derek Stannard said the church was insured, but it was difficult to place a monetary value on a heritage building like the old church.

Anglican newspaper tops awards

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Churchman, national newspaper of the Anglican Church of Canada, won the major award for North American religion newspapers at the Associated Church Press convention in St. Louis, Mo.

The award of merit for general excellence was presented to the publication for the 10th consecutive year.

B.C. conference

Victorians attending United Church parley

A number of Victoria delegates are among 550 attending the 53rd annual meeting of the B.C. conference of the United Church of Canada which started Thursday at St. Andrew's-Wesley United Church in Vancouver and runs through Sunday.

The delegates represent some 240,000 United Church members and adherents in B.C.

Theme speaker is Canadian-educated Dr. Roy Needhall, a former senator in Trinidad recently on the staff of the World Council of Churches in Geneva. Needhall spoke first on Thursday and was to give a second keynote address today.

Today the conference was scheduled to elect its first lay woman president in the person of Mrs. Marilyn Harrison, a lecturer at the Vancouver School of Theology and an active educator as well as a wife and mother.

On Sunday evening in its closing session the conference will ordain four men and three women to its ministry.

Other highlights include Thursday's report on stewardship, which showed that B.C.'s mission increased two per cent last year, accounting for $1,211,410 of the total 1977 United Church Mission and Service Fund contributions of $16,116,355.

Friday saw discussion of campus ministries to community colleges and the progress of B.C.'s 55 United Church candidates to the ministry.

There was also a review of the church's reasons for not getting into national television programming and discussion on global concerns, including South Africa and the Trident nuclear base at Bangor, Wash.

Tonight will see a debate on the church's role in the French-English question, with a special presentation by Dr. Gerald Hobbs of Vancouver School of Theology.

Picnic time again on Gorge

Church Chronicles

The Esquimalt Parks and Recreation Commission, Esquimalt churches and the Esquimalt Anglers Club together with the Family Month Committee are jointly sponsoring a community family picnic Sunday afternoon from 1 to 4:30 p.m. in Gorge Kinsmen Park.

May was proclaimed Family Month by Premier Bill Bennett.

There will be a family picnic at 1 p.m., a concert by Gerry Bryant and the Esquimalt Senior Secondary School Band at 2 and games, races and contests sponsored by the anglers at 3. The idea is to pack a picnic basket and come as a family for a fun afternoon, celebrating family life together.

A concession will be open all afternoon.

A Family Month poster contest for children in grades one to seven has just been completed in Esquimalt schools. Pupils at Craigflower, View Royal, Macaulay, Rockheights and Harbour View schools created posters based on the theme Things Our Family Does Together, and prizes were awarded for first, second and third place posters in each class participating with seven trophies, provided by the Esquimalt Kiwanis Club, awarded the winners in each grade of an inter-school competition for grades one through seven. The contest will be an annual event.

Doctors are required immediately for hospitals in Ocean Falls and Bella Bella, and for a medical clinic at Port Simpson. Even a month's service will be acceptable. Travel expenses and furnished accommodation are provided, and $500 per week. For further information contact Dr. Donald Watt, Supt. of United Church Hospital Staff, Vancouver, 266-5426 (call collect).

The IODE annual service of intercession will be held Sunday at 11 a.m. in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Douglas St. The Rev. Bruce Malloy will officiate.

It is quite an impressive service, with the flags of every chapter based in front of the church and the municipal chapter flags, which are the Canadian flag and the Union Jack, paraded in with the standard bearers of each chapter following. A portion of the church will be set aside for the members to be seated.

Following the service there will be a lunch in the church hall, and after that members will proceed to Ross Bay Cemetery for a remembrance service at 1:30 p.m. at the Cross of Sacrifice. The remembrance service has been observed for more than 60 years by the IODE. All the flags are again paraded at the cemetery, and every chapter places flowers at the Cross of Sacrifice, with the Navy League placing theirs on the naval cairn. A small Canadian flag is placed on each serviceman's grave and buglers sound the Last Post.

Members of the public wishing to attend the two services are welcome.

Trinity Christian Centre's choir will present its last musical of the season, Psalms, Hymns and Spiritual Songs, tonight at 7:30 at the centre, Raynor at Fullerton.

Selections range from southern spirituals through contemporary and modern gospel songs to upbeat hymn arrangements with the audience invited to join in the hand clapping and foot stomping. A special feature will be a choral duet with members of Puppet Productions joining the 50-voice choir. Also featured will be a song specially written by choir member Tony Reynolds, former director of Rainbow band, and arranged by the choir's accompanist, Greg Davidson.

Two contemporary groups, The Cabinet and Act One, will participate in the evening. Trinity Choir is under the direction of Mary Ellen Kingsfield, assisted by Pat Whitworth. Coffee will be served at the end of the evening and a nursery is provided.

The eighth annual horseman's service is Sunday, June 1 at 11:15 a.m. at St. Stephen's Church, Mt. Newton Cross Road.

The service is nationally known and attendance has increased each year. Some stables make it a day event, riding and having a picnic lunch.

After the service, coffee will be served by the church at the hall. Riders and nonriders are welcome.

Nazarenes host B.C. session

Victoria First Church of the Nazarene, 4277 Quadra, will host its sister churches from throughout B.C. as members gather in Victoria to conduct their annual conventions and district assembly from Wednesday through Saturday.

Mrs. Wanda Knox of Kansas City, Mo., president of the General Nazarene World Missionary Society, will be guest speaker on Wednesday. Mrs. Knox and her husband were the first Nazarene missionaries to serve in New Guinea.

On Thursday, Rev. Veldon B. Bobbs, a former military chaplain, will address the Christian life convention.

Coulter

Dr. George Coulter, general superintendent, will preside over this year's annual business sessions and will speak in the evening rallies. Coulter, a Calgary native, is one of the general superintendents from Church of the Nazarene headquarters in Kansas City. He is one of a six-man board of general superintendents, elected at the quadrennial general assemblies, who direct the affairs of the church through the 170 districts in 68 nations of the world.

The Church of the Nazarene is making many changes required by its rapid internationalization. Of the total 625,150 members, 25 per cent are outside of the United States and Canada. A growth percentage of 3.3 was reported in 1977. The church now broadcasts around the world in 18 languages.

Host pastor Rev. Roland Feltmate says the evening rallies, which begin at 7:30, are highlighted with special music and biblical preaching. The public is welcome.

Witnesses draw crowd of 1,600

More than 1,600 people attended the circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses at the Esquimalt Recreation Centre in Victoria last weekend. The local area was represented by 800 delegates. Among them was R. Tannhauser of the Langford congregation.

The public discourse Sunday, on the theme of the good news in the Bible, made the point that no man or body of men, no organization or government could be the source of any feature of the "good news" people need, Tannhauser said, adding, "this is easily seen from the record of mankind's history."

Tannhauser discussed what the "good news" is all about. "The Bible speaks of the good news of God. In other words it includes all the truth about which Jesus spoke and the disciples wrote. The good news contains the sum total of all God's purpose toward humankind.

"The assembly in Victoria helped us all to get a clearer insight into how the good news affects us," Tannhauser said.

"Everything we do in our daily lives can have an effect on it. Therefore we become more conscious of our daily conduct and are able to build a strong and enduring faith as a result. Fortified with this faith, we go forth to help our neighbors."

Libraries group to meet at UVic

The University of Victoria is the site of the 1978 annual meeting and conference of the Congregational Libraries Association, June 2-4.

The program has been designed to appeal to teachers, group leaders and other congregational workers as well as to librarians. The theme of the conference, Resources Waiting to be Tapped, refers to the many books, films, magazines, local, provincial and national associations, individual people and other sources that can help librarians build and extend their services to their congregations. Samples of or information on these resources will be available at the conference. Booksellers have been invited to display and sell books and other materials, and CLABC's own services committee will be on hand with library supplies.

Speaker is Mrs. Lillian Lewis, founder of the CLA in B.C. The association, an inter-faith and inter-denominational organization of volunteers, was founded in 1971 to help provide library services to congregations and encourage the formation of new libraries.

Mrs. Gladys Ewan, a former display artist at the McPherson Library, will talk about the techniques of eye-catching book displays and will illustrate her talk with slides.

During a session on puppet-making conducted by Dr. Jean Dey, faculty of education at University of Victoria, there will an opportunity for a few people to make their own puppets. Puppet Productions from Trinity Christian Centre will be performing.

Other topics to be covered at the conference include cataloguing, selection of fiction, biography and audio-cassettes, standards for congregational libraries, and visiting shut-ins with books. The conference will conclude with visits to libraries in various Victoria churches.

For registration brochures and further information contact Mrs. Fran Rose, 1860 San Juan Ave., Victoria, V8N 2J2, 477-6303.

SEAL OF APPROVAL: No doubt about it, the food is great at the Vancouver Public Aquarium, especially if you're an orphaned seal pup found on a beach by school children from Chilliwack. The seal, which made flight in passenger section accompanied by a teacher, has been named Tes Gede, which is Haida for "little thing on the rocks."

Home Owner Grants For Floating Homes?

Socred MLA Stephen Rogers called on the government Friday to extend the home-owner grant to include floating homes.

"It is disgraceful that these floating homes are assessed, and their owners are required to pay taxes but they cannot benefit from the home-owner grant," the Vancouver-South member said.

He made the remarks during debate on a bill which increases the home-owner grant for senior citizens and the handicapped by $50 to $480.

The standard home-owner grant remains at $280.

Rogers said some of the floating homes cost $45,000 to $50,000, and should qualify for the grant.

Outside the legislature, he said that the B.C. Assessment Authority was quick to recognize the floating homes as residences and to assess them accordingly.

"It is high time that the government show such expeditious speed. It is the only type of housing which is not recognized for grant purposes."

In the legislature, Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said those who failed to apply for the home-owner grant before the deadline will be able to apply for it directly from his ministry if they do so within the following calendar year.

He said that if the application is accepted a cheque for the amount will be sent to the municipality if there are taxes outstanding, or to the home-owner if the taxes are paid in full.

Charles Barber (NDP—Victoria) said the official opposition would support the bill because it is long overdue.

Robert Skelly (NDP—Alberni) expressed regret that the handicapped who are 60 to 64 years old are not eligible for the supplementary grant because of their age.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster) renewed his attack on the government for shifting more of the school tax burden on property owners.

He said local taxpayers now pay 78 per cent more of the school costs than in 1975 when the Social Credit government took office.

Family Act Revisions Criticized

A spokesman for the B.C. Association of Social Workers said Friday that proposed amendments to the Family Relations Act make property division and maintenance for spouses so complicated that spouses will have to go to court to find out where they stand.

The association called for revisions to the amendments to simplify the rules for property division and maintenance.

Association spokesman Jocelyn Gifford said in a news release that there is not enough recognition or protection given to the spouses who stay at home to care for children both during marriage and following separation.

She said the amendments also don't contain provisions for adequate counselling and legal services to help families deal with their feelings and the practical demands of separation.

The association's brief to Attorney-General Garde Gardom says the proposed legislation should be clear, straightforward and equitable so that family members know where they stand and are assured that their rights will be protected.

The association says, however, that it agrees with the removal of fault grounds for determining maintenance and with the general theme of the amendments.

The amendments were introduced in the legislature last session, then withdrawn so the public could make suggestions.

Socred Backs 'Free Votes'

Increasing the number of MLAs without legislative reform will only make the parliamentary process worse, says Socred backbencher Cyril Shelford (Skeena).

Shelford outlined a number of reforms he thinks would make the legislature more efficient in a brief to Judge Lawrence Eckardt's royal commission on electoral reform.

Shelford, a veteran politician first elected in 1952, said as the legislative rules stand now, more members would just increase the already too-long sessions because there is no device to end discussion.

He said the sessions should be limited to a three-month maximum which would require MLAs to be more efficient and end needless repetition.

Because of the difficulty in serving the vast northern ridings the ratio of at least six MLAs from the northern half of the province should be maintained.

Shelford also said that under the current system the only ridings that have any direct strength in governing are those represented by cabinet ministers.

"All other members are little more than constituency ombudsmen."

Members know all decisions are made by cabinet and that debate won't change a thing so they fall into the trap of attacking each other.

Shelford, who is leaving politics at the end of the present government's term, says a free vote system would end the constant bickering and personal attacks.

Free votes would mean the government would have to rely on good legislation rather than on party loyalty to initiate its new programs. As a result the legislation would be better, Shelford maintains.

Only specific non-confidence votes would bring down the government.

Shelford has also called for pre-election runoffs. A week before an election, a runoff would be held leaving only two candidates to contest the general election.

The MLA also said it costs a northern member about $9,500 a year more than an urban member to service his riding.

He advised young people interested in politics to be financially independent or they wouldn't be able to travel in their ridings giving their constituents proper representation.

He recommended that B.C. adopt the Ontario system where an MLA's expenses are picked up by the government during his time in the capital.

Block Parents Wanted

max low

And so to the second of my wish-I-didn't-have-to-write-them pieces.

This one concerns Block Parents and being an idealist and never very realistic, I wish there was no need for such things.

But there is a need, I'm assured. And right now as far as the Block Parents program here is concerned, that need is twofold.

Block Parenting is a community-run program that has the blessing of police departments and most schools. The idea is to give children who are lost, sick, hurt, being bullied by older children, attacked by dogs or in danger of being molested, a safe haven. They go to the nearest home displaying the Block Parent sign in the window and are helped by an adult.

The children do not go to a Block Parent home, though, for food, toilet facilities, transportation or first aid.

Block Parenting began in London, Ontario, in 1968 following a couple of bad incidents there involving children. Today there are 6,000 Block Parents in that city.

Organizers here tell you there is a great need for such a program.

"It's always hard to get figures on child molesting as so many incidents are never reported," explains Anita Nute, Block Parent chairperson for Saanich.

'Yet when we go to schools to talk on the program we always have five or six parents come up and tell us of things that have happened to their children."

In areas where it has become well established, Block Parenting certainly seems to act as a deterrent. In the year before Block Parents moved into Sarnia, Ontario, for example, there were 45 reported attempts to pick up children. Now that figure has dropped to three.

"For one thing," says Anita, the mother of three small children, "the sign itself is a deterrent. It deters the molesters from coming into a neighborhood. They know someone is looking out, keeping a watch."

And as the word spreads through the schools, the children soon learn where they'll be safe.

Even those who don't go to school yet seem to sense a feeling of security.

"We had one little boy below school age who was lost just a couple of blocks from where I live," explains Anita. "He couldn't read but he went to a Block Parent house because he saw the picture in the window of a woman holding a child's hand."

There is a need, says Anita, for more Block Parents everywhere here.

"Roughly, there are about 200 in each of the six areas giving us a total of about 1,200," she points out. "But they are very thinly spread in some parts and we need a lot more."

It costs nothing to be a Block Parent as local service clubs — in Saanich it's the Kiwanis — sponsor the program. And you don't have to be at home a certain number of hours a day to qualify as a Block Parent.

"You simply put the sign in your window when you are available and the rest of the time — like when you're at work — you take it out," Anita says.

And, contrary to popular belief, you don't have to be a parent to be a Block Parent.

But people who apply are very well screened.

"This is one thing all the kids in the schools ask: will the person's house I go to be safe?" says Anita. "Kids have a big fear of being kidnapped, probably because of all the headlines in the papers and the stories on TV."

Ideally, the organizers would like two or more Block Parents in each block in all the areas.

"Sometimes now we have only one in a block or maybe even one in a whole street," she explains.

Anyone interested in becoming a Block Parent can contact their local police department, which has a list of the organizers' phone numbers.

"Every area needs more volunteers," Anita says earnestly. "Just because there's one sign in your block it doesn't mean we don't need you!"

Chopper Trip Was Goosebump Giver

Cold. Make that very cold. But terrific.

So much to see it was tough deciding where to look. Best place not to look was straight down.

At 9 a.m. the press climbed aboard an Okanagan Helicopter for a 20-minute ride over the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

He did say, however, the helicopter carried 13 passengers.

We had liftoff at precisely 9.04 a.m. from the helipad near the Johnson St. bridge. We circled over the breakwater and out over the strait.

For the convenience of press and TV photographers, the doors were opened on both sides of the craft, providing all passengers with a splendid view — and at the same time creating a superb cross-wind.

Make that hurricane. My new hairdo is a mess.

There was a good crowd down on the waterfront along Beacon Hill park, despite the cloudy skies and the threat of drizzle.

At the starting line, more than 300 vessels of various sizes and colors were waiting for the starting gun.

The crews were gaily bedecked in yellow rain slickers and on one pass we went low enough to see faces.

Our pilot, however, stayed far enough to the side to avoid hitting the boats with a downdraft.

There are few thrills in life quite to match the moment when at 500 feet someone flings open the door of a helicopter.

Knuckles turn white, and not just because of the cold. There is a tendency to grab on to anything that's bolted down.

Still, the only way to see what's happening is to lean towards the opening. And after the first few minutes, the feeling of excitement replaces the fear and there is the danger of becoming too casual about the open door.

The occasion, besides the start of Swiftsure, was the beginning of transportation week in Victoria, sponsored by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

And Steele on behalf of Okanagan Helicopters said his company would like to provide a regular helicopter service between Victoria and Vancouver if approval is granted and the service is economically viable.

"We would like to operate a 28-seater which could be in Vancouver in 30 minutes," Steele said.

"But there are a lot of agencies involved in this decision — and a lot of competition."

Steele was referring to Ottawa's financial support of Short Takeoff and Landing airplanes as well as the existing services of seaplanes and land-based planes.

"We could be in operation in one year if we get approval from the various agencies," Steele said.

Chamber vice president Bob Wheaton said the chamber hopes to see the service established because any additional transportation link will be beneficial to the community.

Phys Ed Teachers Hold Session Here

More than 360 physical education teachers from all parts of B.C. will attend a three-day physical education conference in Victoria June 8-10.

The conference, sponsored by the University of Victoria, will be held on the UVic campus and in two elementary schools.

One aim of the conference is to improve the teaching of physical education in primary grades where teachers often have only minimal training in physical education.

"These teachers have a key role to play," says Dr. John Jackson of the UVic faculty of education.

"The seeds of lifestyles are sown in the early grades and if the teaching of physical education is not done properly, children can become discouraged about participating."

Jackson, who is the conference program organizer, said there will be major workshops at the secondary school level.

RETIRING CHIEF OPENS FIREHALL

Gains retires June 2 after 32 years service.

The 4,000-square-foot building, which contains officer's quarters, a reception area, control room and training areas, replaces the hall on Hamsterly.

An ambulance will be stationed at the new hall to provide 24-hour emergency service for the Royal Oak area.

Board Rapped By Librarians

School board policies are forcing teacher librarians out of elementary school libraries, a spokesman for the Greater Victoria School Librarians Association said today.

Gary Rupert said the association has fired off letters of complaint to both Education Minister Pat McGeer and the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

"Elementary school librarians are being told to take teaching jobs or resign," Rupert said.

He said next year there could be as few as four full-time librarians in the elementary school system here. At one time there were as many as 24.

The association met Thursday and decided to make their problems public after months of wrangling with school district officials over the state of affairs.

He said the school board's concern over class sizes has forced principals to make drastic cuts, such as library and music, from schools.

He said the board's calculation of teacher-pupil ratios is artificial because all administrators and specialized teachers are included.

Rupert said Superintendent Ken Staples informed the association a month ago that while the school board sets the teacher-student ratio, principals have sole discretion on size of classes.

Rupert said principals are faced with the dilemna of chosing between special programs or small classes.

Some principals are getting around the problem by hiring library aides, but Rupert charged that is a direct contravention of BCTF policies.

"They've been cutting back on this and cutting back on that. Everyone's living in fear of his job.

Teacher Discord Reports 'Untrue'

Reports of discord among teachers in Victoria's Catholic school system are unfounded and untrue, says the chairman of St. Andrews elementary school board.

Dr. W.G. Krutzmann said he has received no indication teachers are unhappy with negotiations for salary hikes expected to be made when the provincial government begins funding independent schools in September.

His comment came after the Times learned some first year teachers at the school are so upset over the promise of small salary increases they are threatening to quit.

Krutzmann denied there are any difficulties.

"There've been no problems with the negotiations or otherwise," he said.

He added however there has always been a struggle with subsidies and fees in allowing boards to give a fairer salary.

At present, first year teachers at St. Andrews receive $650 a month.

If they stay on next year they'll get $750 a month and the maximum is $1,000 a month.

"What we've always gone on is the good faith and dedication of the people involved," Krutzmann said.

He said his school board and those of the four other Catholic boards in the Greater Victoria area are cautious about announcing salary increases at this time.

Some reports indicate the government subsidy will be in the order of $400 to $500 a student.

"But we'll have to wait until we get the government support and take it from there," Krutzmann said.

He said the government won't spell out the amount of aid until late August or September and the money won't actually reach the boards until January.

"We still have to base our budget on the current fee schedules," he said.

Meanwhile, Education Minister Pat McGeer says he will not enter into the current pay dispute between teachers at Roman Catholic schools and their employers.

The controversy arose earlier this week when teachers in Vancouver complained that money coming from the provincial government under the new Independent Schools Support Act will be pocketed by the churches instead of going to increase salaries and reduce tuition as intended.

A Vancouver archdiocese spokesman said salaries for teachers at Catholic schools will be increased by up to 45 per cent because of the new funds, but teachers say most increases will be much less.

Catholic school teachers earn from $6,000 to $10,000 now, about half what their counterparts in the public school system earn.

"The teachers must solve their own problems with their employers in these independent schools," McGeer said.

"Certainly, the last thing the government would do would be to interfere with employer-employee relationships in an independent school."

There are between 800 to 900 students attending Catholic Schools in Greater Victoria, with about 230 at St. Andrews elementary and 40 more enrolled at St. Andrews high school, which has only been going for two years.

Winnipeg Escaper Nabbed

He will face charges of escaping and being unlawfully at large from the Headingly institution.

Steigenberger was arrested near his parent's home on Atkins Road in Colwood.

A Colwood RCMP spokesman said police officers were at the home interviewing the parents when the suspect drove into the driveway.

Steigenberger spotted the officers and ran off into nearby bushes.

The RCMP dog team was brought in and within an hour tracked down the wanted man who.

Police said Steigenberger surrendered without struggle.

Health Officer Urges Play Area Dog Ban

He made the statement after revealing that a Salt Spring Island man is recovering from the rarely-diagnosed disease toxocariasis.

Humans, mostly children, become infected through the faeces of cats or dogs, usually by eating contaminated soil.

The unidentified Salt Spring Island man is believed to have caught the disease by eating unwashed carrots. Arneil warned that fruit and vegetables that may have been in a contaminated area should be washed before eating.

Though it is rarely fatal, Arneil said the disease can cause lung, liver or central nervous system symptoms.

Arneil said animals should be kept away from parks, beaches and children's play areas as much as possible to lessen the chance of infection.

The infected soil contains larvae which, when eaten, can burrow through the human intestine to reach the liver and lungs and, from these, any organ of the body.

Arneil said the larvae could reach the back of an eye, destroying sight.

He said there is no cause for panic but he reported the case because where one has occurred there could be more.

He said the symptoms are hard to spot. In the case of the Salt Spring Island man the disease had been detected by blood tests.

Arneil urged owners of cats and dogs to regularly deworm their animals, especially when young, and control what they eat by preventing them from roaming and foraging.

HEATHCLIFFE THE MOOCH

He's Fat, Saucy And Famous

Yes, Virginia, there is a Heathcliffe.

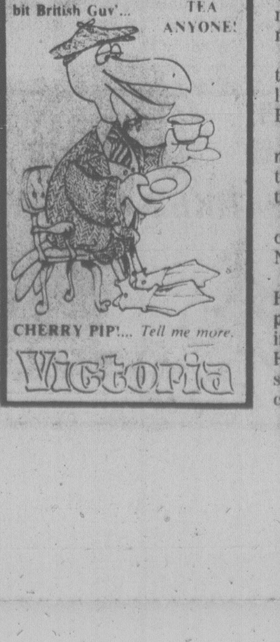
"He's one of the three seagulls that are always hanging around the Causeway," says VIC information officer Lorraine Cooper.

"We noticed people feeding them and we particularly noticed the largest seagull who was big, fat and saucy."

She said one day she talked to several women who were feeding the birds and discovered the seagulls had been given names.



We're a little bit British Guv'...
TEA ANYONE!
CHERRY PIP!... Tell me more.
Victoria

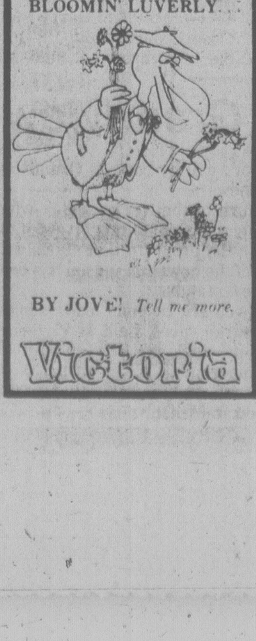
"I was told the biggest one was Heathcliffe, the smaller male was Spike and the female was Gertrude."

This happened at the same time the visitors bureau was looking for a symbol and Heathcliffe was adopted.

"It's a British-sounding name, you see, and it follows the theme of Follow the Birds to Victoria. It was ideal."

The caricatures of Heathcliffe are by local cartoonist Nelson Dewey.

The plan is to have a Heathcliffe sketch on tourist press releases and to use him in a variety of other ways like Heathcliffe buttons and tee shirts and as a parade mascot.



We're BLOOMIN' LUVERLY...
BY JOVE! Tell me more.
Victoria

"We want him to be in parades. Heathcliffe will become our big bird and he should be a hit with the kiddies."

Meanwhile, Heathcliffe, the real seagull, continues to rule his Causeway domain and perch on the tourist bureau's flagpole.

He is described as being grey and very big, almost twice the size of the other seagulls.

'Move That Door' Kenny Warns Rocks

Ken Alexander is always willing to try something new; and now, as the full-fledged coach of the Nanaimo Timbermen of the Western Lacrosse Association, he's got the opportunity and he's taking full advantage of it.

Last year he had some ideas on rules and told the league officials what he thought. Specifically then his complaint was that a goal scorer shouldn't have his goal allowed if he received a follow-through penalty on the shot. It made sense. However, if officials didn't exactly act on Alexander's recommendations they did make some other rule changes this year on which school is still out.

And maybe partly because one of the new rules, Alexander has found a loophole; and now the entire league has run into an Alexander wrinkle that works — pulling the goalkeeper for an extra attacker. Not that removing a goalkeeper is that new in lacrosse, but the manner in which Alexander has been doing it, is. He's not just waiting until late in the game and when all other means appear to have failed. He's doing at any and all times, and taking advantage of the rules as well.

Case in point is the rule whereby a team shorthanded due to penalty is not subject to the shooting time clock and, if it can retain possession, it saves on the other club's power-play opportunities. And also, because of that rule, teams can throw an extra player on the floor, play even, take their chances without a goalkeeper and maybe keep the ball the entire two minutes. This wasn't possible under the old shooting rule. The Timbermen did that the other night. Alexander feels it might pay to take a chance. Besides, he's got the shooters to go with the ploy, wichever way he uses it. It's working, and working very well indeed, and he'll go with it until proven wrong.

As a matter of fact, in the first six games of the season, Alexander pulled his goalkeeper 24 times and the Timbermen were only burned twice. Which isn't bad considering the fact that the Timbermen scored 22 goals with that extra man, and four of those goals came against the Shamrocks at Nanaimo last Saturday in the Timbermen's 10-8 win.

As Alexander explained it: "Why not? If we're shorthanded it makes us even; and, if we're even, it gives us a man edge. I even used it in a 12-12 tie game against Coquitlam and we won."

So the second time around the league the teams will be trying to defence the Alexander plan. The Shamrocks were forced into it Wednesday and their answer was to put their best ball handlers on the floor so, that if possession was gained, there would be a better chance of a quick break and an empty goal to shoot at. And that worked too.

Still, the Timbermen have made things interesting and right now they are causing the other clubs problems — just thinking about it.

Kenny's been around and he's a thinker. He played his first game with the Shamrocks at age 18 in 1965. And he stayed with the Irish through until the 1974 season when he, like so many others, took a fling at professional lacrosse.

His best year with the Rocks was 1971 when he scored 37 goals and had 41 assists for 78 points. He joined Nanaimo in 1976 and last year had the dual role of player and assistant coach. In all, he scored 201 goals and 208 assists for 409 points in the WLA and the ICLL.

He's got ideas, he's innovative and, while the teams are trying to stop his extra-man attack, maybe the league has another problem, albeit, a minor one. And it's Alexander produced as well.

Alexander wants the south door on the Shamrock players' box moved six feet north. "It's not quite fair," he suggested after the Timbermen's 22-15 defeat at the hands of the Shamrocks Wednesday night. "That door is six feet closer to the south goal than the north door of the visitors' box is to the north goal and, as they shoot in that direction two periods out of three, it can make a difference.

"And it wasn't always like that," he pointed out. "When I used to play here the door was there" and he pointed out the spot, clearly visible, where the old door had been.

What effect Alexander's protest will have will be interesting and maybe all the other boxes in the league will have to be measured as well. And can it make a difference? Well, six feet is six feet and with a couple of breakaway threats like Ron MacNeil and Ranjit Dillon breaking out of there on a possession change, it could be one step might be the difference.

Which is why Kenny doesn't want the Rocks to have any unfair advantages; and who's to blame him for that?

Cheadle Class Catch by Mussels

Victoria Mussels have come up with a major acquisition for their first season in the Northwest Baseball League.

The signing of Dave Cheadle, a 25-year-old lefthander, was almost cause for a celebration in the offices of the team that is bringing back professional baseball to Victoria after an absence of 25 years.

Cheadle, six-three and 200 pounds, was New York Yankees' first choice, and third overall, in the major league's 1971 draft. The two players selected ahead of Cheadle in that draft were Mike Ivie, now with San Francisco Giants, and Barry Foote, now with Philadelphia Phillies.

Cheadle, who had played with Mussel co-owners Jim Chapman and Don Rogelstad, remained in the Yankee system for four years, primarily at the triple A level although he did see limited action with New York.

In 1974, the Yankees traded Cheadle to Atlanta Braves for pitcher Pat Dobson, a former 20-game winner. Cheadle's first appearance in the National League was a memorable one. He struck out Cincinnati's Pete Rose with the bases loaded in front of a capacity crowd in Riverfront Stadium.

Dealt later to Pittsburgh Pirates, contract difficulties prompted Cheadle to give up baseball in favor of education at North Carolina State College.

"Don and I thought about Cheadle," said Chapman. "We looked for his name on the major and triple A league rosters. We didn't know he gave up pro baseball.

"Then the other day we thought we'd try and track him down. Funny thing, he was just thinking about returning to baseball. He said to give him some time to think about our offer. He phoned back in 45 minutes."

"And do you know what else he said?" interjected Rogelstad, "He said he'd be happy 'to help a couple of old friends get their club off the ground. . .and help them win a pennant, too.'

"You're going to like this guy. . .southern drawl and all."

Cheadle is the seventh player signed by the Mussels.

Not signed, yet, but certainly scheduled to play are Chapman and Rogelstad.

"Once you sign a contract," explained Rogelstad, "You can't play for any other team. I've got a chance to pitch in the Metro International League in Vancouver this weekend. I need the work. I couldn't pitch if I was already under contract."

Mussels open their season June 20 in Bellingham and return to Royal Athletic Park the next day for their home opener.

An Old Nemesis Batters Blue Jays

By Associated Press

Like many a New York slugger of yesteryear, Cliff Johnson put on his Yankees pinstripes Friday night and scared the opposition to death. Then Jim Spencer took over and bludgeoned them into submission.

Toronto Blue Jays, behind left-hander Jerry Garvin, were clinging to a 2-0 lead when the Yankees loaded the bases with one out in the bottom of the seventh on singles by Lou Piniella and Chris Chambliss and a walk to Graig Nettles.

That brought up designated hitter Johnson, who does most of his hitting, designated and otherwise, against the Blue Jays. Last year, he battered Toronto pitchers for eight hits, including five homers off Garvin, in 21 at-bats and drove in 10 runs. Both of his 1978 homers have come at the Blue Jays' expense.

The ensuing battle of wits saw Harry Warner, Toronto's acting manager, bring in right-hander Tom Murphy to relieve Garvin. New York's Billy Martin countered by sending Spencer up to bat for Johnson.

Murphy's first two pitches were balls. Spencer hit the third one over the fence for a grand slam that gave the Yankees a 4-3 triumph.

"I would do it again, considering Garvin's record against Johnson," Warner said. "Murphy has pitched well for us and I would make the same move tomorrow."

"So would I," cackled Martin.

Spencer's grand slam nullified a pair of homers by Toronto's John Mayberry, a two-run shot off Jim Beattie in the sixth inning and a solo blast off Sparky Lyle in the eighth.

The victory was the Yankees' fifth in a row and 20th in their last 26 games. They trail first-place Boston by one game in the AL East.

In other American League baseball action, Boston Red Sox beat Detroit Tigers 6-3, California Angels defeated Milwaukee Brewers 6-5, Oakland A's defeated Chicago White Sox 3-1, Seattle Mariners beat Texas Rangers 6-4 and Baltimore Orioles beat Cleveland Indians 4-3. The Kansas City-Minnesota game was rained out.

In the National League, Willie McCovey drove in five runs with a single and a homer and San Francisco Giants beat Los Angeles Dodgers 6-1.

McCovey's homer was his fourth of the season and drew two standing ovations from the crowd of 43,646, the largest night-time baseball crowd ever at San Francisco's Candlestick Park.

Elsewhere, Pittsburgh Pirates beat Montreal Expos 2-1 with Manny Sanguillen hitting a two-run homer; pitcher Tom Seaver scored his fourth win of the season when Cincinnati Reds defeated San Diego Padres 3-1; knuckleballer Phil Niekro pitched a six-hitter and Atlanta Braves beat Philadelphia Phillies 4-2; Chicago Cubs beat St. Louis Cardinals 6-0 with Dave Rader driving in four runs, and Houston Astros defeated New York Mets 5-4 with Jose Cruz's two-run homer in the sixth inning providing the winning runs.

Collegiate Coach Says No to Stars

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — University of Minnesota hockey coach Herb Brooks declined Friday to accept an offer by North Stars general manager Lou Nanne to coach the National Hockey League team.

In a brief statement issued by the school's sports information department, Brooks said:

"I have turned down the offer from Lou Nanne to coach the National Hockey League Minnesota North Stars."

"I'm flattered for Lou's confidence in me, but I believe it's in the best interests for me and my family to stay at the University of Minnesota next season, and then assume the hockey coaching assignment for the 1980 Olympics."

Terms of the offer were not revealed, but it was reported to be a one-year contract at an estimated $40,000. Sources say Brooks was seeking a three-year pact.

In addition, men's athletic director Paul Giel has offered Brooks a sabbatical for the year he will miss while coaching the Olympic team.

The North Stars, who finished last in the Smythe Division, played under three different coaches during the 1977-78 season—Ted Harris, Andre Beaulieu and Nanne, who would prefer to function soley as a general manager.

CONTINUING sensation of Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, rookie Nancy Lopez is off and running in bid to win fifth tournament this year. She fired five-under 67 Friday for first-round lead in event at New Rochelle, N.Y. See story on page 17.

League Buys Flin Flon's Franchise

There will be a new name in the Western Canada Hockey League lineup next season because Flin Flon Bombers are no longer in business.

Once a power in the far-flung WCHL, the Bombers' franchise has been purchased by the league in the hopes it may be relocated to a more convenient geographical location.

At it stands now, the choice is between Edmonton, Winnipeg and Spokane.

League president Ed Chynoweth, meeting with governors in Calgary, confirmed the purchase so that "we can decide ourselves who gets the franchise, and where it will go."

He refused to reveal the purchase price.

Both Edmonton and Winnipeg, mainstays of the league in the past, have been without entries after the Oil Kings shifted to Portland and Winnipeg's franchise was relocated in Calgary.

Spokane also is considered a possibility although a move there may be met by opposition from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Although Flin Flon has been a part of the western junior scene for more than three decades, the northern Manitoba mining town has never been popular with other teams, primarily because of difficult travel conditions.

IRISH WELCOME RANJIT, IVAN BACK TO RANKS

There's a lot of shooting power back in the ranks of Victoria Shamrocks, who play one of their rare Saturday Western Lacrosse Association home games tonight against New Westminster Salmonbellies at 8 in Memorial Arena.

The Rocks had reason for happiness Friday when they learned that two sharpshooting veterans — Ranjit Dillon and Ivan Thompson — had decided it was time to rejoin the club.

Dillon, the club's all-time scoring leader and top career point-collector among active WLA players, is ready to give an injured shoulder another try tonight. The shoulder, hurt during last season's playoffs and re-injured in pre-season training, now appears to be fully healed.

Thompson, long one of the Shamrock stars and the team's scoring leader last year, started the season and then elected to take time out while he considered retirement from lacrosse. Ivan, appearing in excellent condition at practice Friday, may also be in action tonight although he may wait until next week to make his return.

Husky Help For the Macs

Big games are coming up and Victoria McDonalds are hoping a big young man will help lead them out of the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League wilderness.

Bowing to the spectator appeal of Stanley Cup hockey telecasts, the Macs postponed their Tuesday battle against Coquitlam until Sunday at Esquimalt Sports Centre, starting at 8 p.m.

Making his debut with the Macs in that one will be Ken Murray, a six-two, 206-pounder from Port Alberni who has been developing in the Juan de Fuca minor lacrosse organization.

"These are key games for us," says Muzz Bryant, coach of the Macs, who make their next start at home Tuesday against Richmond. "We need victories at home."

While the Victorians, now with three wins in seven starts after dropping a pair last weekend, are adding Murray to their roster, they will still be without the services of two regulars. Jeff Whitney-Griffiths is still troubled by a leg injury and Brian Bell will be sidelined for a while with an injured hand.

HARRY NEALE IS CANUCKS' ANSWER

Not Hired to Sell Tickets

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks went searching for a stern disciplinarian seven weeks ago and Friday came up with Harry Neale as their answer to improving the free-spirit attitude of the National Hockey League team.

Neale was signed to a three-year coaching agreement by general manager Jake Milford after buying up the remaining one year on his contract with New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association.

"I feel I can make the necessary contributions in the coaching department to improve this team," Neale told a hastily-called news conference. "Now I've got to find out if the players are willing to make the same contributions.

"If some of them aren't, they won't be playing here."

The Canucks have missed the playoffs in the Smythe Division the last two years and only twice in their eight-season NHL existence have they participated in the post-season frolic for the Stanley Cup.

Five previous coaches have felt the wrath of ownership and been fired. Neale, 41, never missed the playoffs in his six seasons as a coach in the WHA.

"I'll have to learn in training camp which players I can trust to do the job," he said.

Milford fired coach Orland Kurtenbach early last month when the Canucks finished third in their division behind Chicago Black Hawks and Colorado Rockies. Vancouver had a seven-point lead over Colorado with three weeks left, but failed to win key games down the stretch.

"I've watched Harry Neale closely since about the middle of February," said Milford. "I've watched him coach games, run practices and I've talked to guys who have played for him.

"I've come to the conclusion that he's one of the best hockey men in the game.

"When I heard one of his players say that he's too demanding of them, that's when I decided he's the man for the job."

Milford said he considered two other coaches for the job—Scotty Bowman of the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens and Fred Shero of Philadelphia Flyers.

Shero resigned earlier this week, but still has a year left on his contract, while Bowman is rumored heading for Colorado, perhaps in an ownership position.

Neale, an all-star defenceman as a junior for Toronto Marlboros, didn't play professional hockey. He obtained degrees at the University of Toronto and McMaster University and started his coaching career at Ohio State University in 1966.

He went to the junior ranks in 1970 with Hamilton Red Wings and moved to Minnesota Fighting Saints of the WHA in 1972-73 as an assistant under coach Glen Sonmor.

Neale became coach of the Fighting Saints late that season and continued until the team folded in the 1975-1976 season. He then joined the Whalers.

Milford said there was a lot of pressure to hire popular Ernie McLean, the successful coach of New Westminster Bruins, Memorial Cup champions the last two seasons.

"I think we've now got the best man for the job," added Milford. "I didn't hire Harry to sell tickets."

Racing at Grandview

The sound of snarling motors will be back at Grandview Bowl in Nanaimo this weekend.

Automobile racing will return to the track Sunday when stock cars and super-stocks open the Nanaimo portion of the Island championship series in the program that starts with time trials at 1 p.m. Opening of the bowl this season has been delayed by construction of new stands.

Gordie Stone and Jim Caudwell are the point leaders in the Island series after the first three races, held at Victoria's Western Speedway. Stone tops stock-car drivers with 408 points and Caudwell lead super-stock pilots with 355. Al Miller (355) is second to Stone and Larry Pollard (181) follows Caudwell on the super-stock list.

Mitchell to Coach

SACKVILLE, N.B. (CP) — Doug Mitchell, who spent nine years in the Canadian Football League as a centre and played on three Grey Cup champion clubs, was named Friday as head football coach of the Mount Allison Mounties of the Atlantic Universities conference.

Gorge Surges Into Top Berth

Gorge Vale took over first place, but Uplands and Glen Meadows also scored impressive victories Friday to move into contending positions in the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf League.

Gorge veterans were more adept than their rivals in winning close contests, taking three as all the four singles matches went to the final hole. Tom Milligan, Keith Alexander and Norm Parsons each won their singles as Gorge defeated Victoria 4-2 on the Gorge course and moved into the top spot, a single point ahead of Victoria, the defending league champion.

Cedar Hill players had a tough afternoon at Uplands, dropping a 5-1 decision to the host club, which surged into a second-place deadlock with Victoria.

Colwood also encountered problems in enemy territory, getting only half a point against Glen Meadows on the long North Saanich layout.

Button Victory

After a 62, 69 'Boring'

ATLANTA (AP) — Dave Eichelberger said it was "really sort of boring."

Of course, he was comparing it to a record-setting, first-round 62 on Thursday, so Friday's three-under-par 69 didn't especially stir the lanky Texan who stretched his lead to three shots at the midway mark of the $200,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

"It would be a little unrealistic to come out thinking you could shoot another 62," he said. "A round like yesterday comes around about once a year, if that often. I figured anything under 70 today would be pretty good."

The 69 left him at 13-under-par 131, equalling the best 36-hole total on the tour this year.

He did, however, face a strong challenge from leading money-winner Tom Watson, seeking a fourth victory this season, and two players nursing ailing backs—Jerry Heard and Bob Murphy.

Taking advantage of the ideal weather, the PGA stars continued to rip apart the Atlanta course, and it took a one-under-par 143 to survive the cut.

The biggest name that failed was Jack Nicklaus, who went 73-74 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds for only the third time in three years.

Also mising the cut was George Knudson of Toronto with a 75—148. Jim Nelford of Burnaby survived with a 72 for 141.

Ballesteros Trails Hayes

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Dale Hayes of South Africa had a four-under par 68 to lead the field after the first day of a PGA golf tournament Friday.

Hayes, who has already won the French and Italian titles this year, held a one-stroke lead over four players, including Spaniard Severiano Ballesteros.

Ballesteros, scoring birdies on the last two holes, had a three-under-par 69 along with Englishmen John Hammond and Peter Townsend and Gary Cullen, a Kenyan who now plays in England.

BIBBY, BEER CLOSE IN JUNIOR EVENTS

Delesalle In Command

OTTAWA (CP) — Defending champions Philip Delesalle of Victoria and Karen Kelsall of Surrey surprised no one Friday when they vaulted into the lead after the first day of competition at the Canadian gymnastics championships.

Delesalle was easily the most consistent senior men's performer, winning three of six compulsory events and finishing second in two others. He had a comfortable lead over Jean Choquette of Montreal.

Kelsall had a tougher time, winning only one of four events and finishing second twice. She leads Elfi Schlegel of Toronto by a fraction of a point.

Dave Bibby of Victoria was third in junior men while Tracy Beer of Victoria was runner-up in junior women.

The top six senior men and women will make up the team which competes later this year at the world championships while the top four will represent Canada in the Commonwealth Games at Edmonton.

Warren Long of Montreal was in third place in the senior men's standings ahead of team-mate Pierre Leclerc, Owen Walstrom of Victoria and Nigel Rothwell of Windsor, Ont.

Optional routines will be performed today with the finals taking place Sunday.

Delesalle was the only gymnast to receive scores over nine for all the events.

He and Choquette duelled their way around the floor with each scoring relatively high. But Delesalle's decisive victory on floor exercises provided him with a comfortable two-point lead.

Lopez Continues To Hold Hot Hand

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, the rookie sensation of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour who never before had played at the Wykagyl Country Club, shot a five-under-par 67 Friday and took the first-round lead in the $100,000 Golden Lights tournament.

The 21-year old Lopez, winner of four titles this year, had seven birdies and two bogeys to hold a one-stroke lead over Amy Alcott.

Alcott, rookie of the year in 1975 and 12th on this year's money winning list, was one stroke ahead of Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., who started out with a bogey six on the opening hole but still finished with a 69.

Mary Lou Crocker, Betty Burfeindt, Penny Pulz and Vivian Brownlee were tied for fourth with 70s. JoAnne Carner, the defending champion, had a 71 along with Patty Hayes.

"This is a thinking golf course," said Post, who now makes her home in Boynton Beach, Fla. "It's one of the best we play all year. I had taken the last two weeks off and didn't touch a club in 15 days, I'm pretty happy with the way things went."

Lopez, who joined the LPGA last July, already has set a rookie record with earnings of $81,448.

Rogers Sets Mark

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Slowed by blistering heat and humidity, two-time Boston Marathon champion Bill Rodgers captured first place Friday in the Indianapolis mini-marathon, finishing the race in record time.

Rodgers, of Boston, took 63 minutes, 43.1 seconds to cover the 13-mile-plus course that wound from downtown Indianapolis to the finish line at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. He shaved 13 seconds off the time set last year by Frank Shorter in the first Indy Mini.

Rodgers was the first of 2,440 starters to cross the finish line followed by Bob McOmber of Bowling Green, Ohio, and Nestor Moreno, an Indiana University student from Puerto Rico. Miki Gorman, a Los Angeles housewife and veteran marathoner, won the women's title, finishing in 80 minutes and 56 seconds.

Fishing Fathers Will Love It!
Electric HookSharp

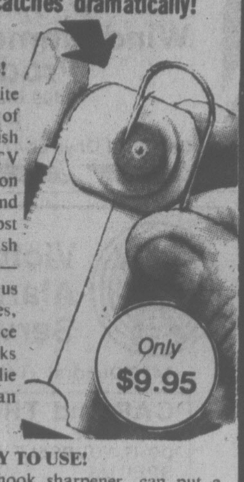
UNDERWATER TV PRODUCES STARTLING FINDINGS!

Fishing Author Charlie White has been studying the habits of Salmon and other game fish with an underwater TV camera, looking for clues on how and why fish attack and strike a lure. One of his most startling findings was that fish ARE striking at our lures — more often than any of us dream! They bit at our lures, but the hooks usually bounce off! By sharpening his hooks until "sticky-Sharp," Charlie was able to more than DOUBLE his usual catch.



Only $9.95

IT'S EASY TO USE!

HookSharp, the electric hook sharpener, can put a sticky-sharp point on your hooks in a few seconds. A tiny electric motor, battery driven, spins a special grinding wheel to touch up the points of single or treble hooks. And it sharpens knives, too.

NEW HOOKS NOT SHARP ENOUGH!

Most fish hooks are stamped out in quantity, and are not sharp enough — even when brand new! You should sharpen all hooks — new and old — just before you put them in the water.

WALLIS CRACKS PAIR OF HOME RUNS

Glen's Bat Sparks Elks

At six feet, five inches, Glen Wallis is a towering figure in his shortstop position with Elks in the Stuffy McGinnis Softball League.

Glen also stood tall and mighty in the batter's box at Central Park Friday night as Elks continued their recent climb and moved within two points of third-place Sooke Merchants.

Wallis cracked a pair of home runs in successive times at bat to provide much of the power as Elks charged to a 12-2 triumph over Victoria Athletics, pounding 10 hits from the pitches of veteran Jack Lundquist.

Wallis drove in four runs and scored three times. Mike Lee rapped a triple and two singles and also scored three runs. Alf Hass drove in two tallies and crossed the plate twice.

Bob Harris performed a little magic in tough situations as he pitched the distance for Elks, yielding 10 hits and three times working his way out of bases-loaded problems.

Victoria Skylarks had the most fun at Hyacinth Park in a Victoria Senior Women's League game postponed earlier because of rain. With Shar Eden rapping three singles, Skylarks soared to a 9-3 victory over MacDonald's Furniture.

Flay Hall was a big gunner in a Heywood Men's League contest at Heywood Park, blasting a home run and adding a single to help Hygrade Radio overpower Webb and Trace 7-3.

Jack Pitrie earned the pitching win for Hygrade despite giving up a homer to Barry Moen and a triple to Dave Barnard.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The bay filly Tage, which disappointed as favorite by running third in its career debut, came from off the pace Friday to win the $10,000-added Cinderella for two-year-old fillies at Exhibition Park.

Tage, a Kentucky bred daughter of Poker-Irreplacable was bought as a weanling for $8,000 by the Jawl Brothers of Victoria.

The Cinderella, first stakes race of the season for the juveniles, had 10 horses at the gate with Sly Gesture, which beat Tage in the Nursery Course maiden May 5, the 2-1 favorite.

STINGERS KEEP TRYING

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Stingers announced Friday that offices will be open 24 hours a day over the Memorial Day weekend in the United States and through Thursday to sell season tickets in an attempt to keep the World Hockey Association franchise afloat.

The Stingers were ordered by the WHA to sell 5,000 season tickets by June 1 to keep the franchise.

Dunsmuir Scores Track Triumph

Dunsmuir athletes turned in a sparkling display Friday at the Claremont track to give their school its first Sooke-Saanich junior high school track and field championship.

Spencer took third place with 267, followed by North Saanich-Parkland (146), Edward Milne (93) and Stelly's Cross Road (59).

Sakaluk, who set a meet pole vault record by clearing 10 feet, nine inches, was selected as the outstanding athlete in the junio rboys' section. Sievert was named the top performer among midget boys after winning the 1500-metre run in 4:48.2 and the Dunsmuir relay squad, after a record-setting 4:16.9 clocking, received the junior girls' outstanding-performance award.

Kaja Brix of Royal Oak earned the award in the midget girls' division for her record-breaking time of 13.8 in the 80-metre hurdles.

Weatherman Keeping Indianapolis Drivers On Edge

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The 33 drivers who will start Sunday's 62nd Indianapolis 500-mile race are on edge.

The nearly month-long period of prepping for the world's richest auto race always is filled with anxiety. But, this year, it was even worse than usual because of incessant rain that hampered practice, wiped out one complete weekend of qualifying and dampened everyone's spirits.

"It's been rougher than I can ever remember," said Bobby Unser, winner of the Memorial Day event in 1968 and 1975. "We waited to practice, we waited to qualify . . . and now we're waiting for the race. We just haven't been able to do the things we've wanted to."

The wait will be over, weather permitting, at 8 a.m. (PDT) Sunday. The only real problem remaining is that weather forecasts call for about a 40 per-cent chance of rain.

In recent years, there have been almost as many eyes, at any given moment, peering skyward as there were watching the colorful, roaring racers wheel over the 2½-mile asphalt Indy oval.

Only five Indianapolis races have been shortened by rain, the first in 1950. But the last three have been in the last five years. The 1973 race, won by Gordon Johncock, was red-flagged to a halt when rain fell after 332½ miles.

Unser got the benefit of a downpour after 435 miles in 1975, while Johnny Rutherford was in the lead when rain ended the 1976 Indy after 255 miles.

There was a general feeling of relief when last year's race went the distance, with A. J. Foyt becoming the first driver to win here four times.

Defending national driving champion Tom Sneva, Danny Ongais and Indy rookie Rick Mears, comprising the first of 11 rows of cars in the field, will lead the way into the first turn of the 200-lap race. Rutherford, Al Unser — Bobby's younger brother and also a two-time winner — and Johncock make up the second row.

The defending champion failed in his attempt at the pole position, which Sneva won for the second straight year, because of a mechanical problem that cut short his first qualifying attempt. He got into the field easily last Sunday, then blew his engine to pieces Thursday during carburetion testing. Foyt had to send the engine back to his Houston garage for rebuilding, meaning he would be using an untested engine Sunday.

The only other previous winner in the field is 1969 champion Mario Andretti, who gave up his chance at the pole and the front rows in order to drive in the Belgian Grand Prix, which he won. Andretti's car was qualified here by Mike Hiss.

Starting from the 28th position is Cliff Hucul of Prince George, the only Canadian, in a McLaren-Offenhauser.

EX-CONVICT BOXER IN CRITICAL CONDITION AFTER SHOOTING

NEW YORK (AP) — Detectives waited Friday to talk to ex-convict boxer Bobby Halpern who was lying in critical condition under police guard in a Bronx hospital after being gunned down in a clothing store.

Halpern, who had been trying to make a boxing comeback after 17 years in prison, was in a Bronx hospital where he was described as "still critical but stable." A Hospital spokesman said Halpern, 45, had been "awake and to some extent alert" during the day, but had not yet been able to speak to detectives investigating Thursday evening's shooting.

Detective Michael Tiso said police still did not know the motive for the shooting of the heavyweight boxer.

There was a published report that Halpern was the target of former inmates seeking revenge over an old prison grudge, but Tiso called it "speculation at this time."

Halpern was shopping Thursday in a Bronx clothing store when two young men walked in. One opened fire with a .38-calibre revolver, the second with a 12-gauge shotgun. Then they fled. Halpern was hit in the face, chest, groin, legs, buttocks and hands.

ALI-STEVENSON MEETING GETS APPROVAL

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The International Association of Amateur Boxing has approved a possible match under amateur rules between former world heavyweight champ Muhammad Ali and Cuban Olympic and world gold medallist Teofilo Stevenson.

Hector Cardona, president of the Amateur Boxing Federation of Puerto Rico, said on his return from the world amateur tournament in Yugoslavia that the ruling was made in response to a request from Cuba.

"The association approved a petition from the Cuban delegate, Waldo Santiago, to permit an exhibition fight in the future between Ali and Stevenson, but the match would not have a decision," Cardona said.

Dock Ellis Feuding With Manager

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Billy Hunter, manager of the Texas Rangers, and disgruntled player representative Dock Ellis met Friday over differences which occurred during a recent road trip, and both men came away with the impression that nothing had changed.

Ellis had encouraged his teammates to break Hunter's rules, which include no drinking at the hotel bar. He said, "We met and that's about all you can say ... Nothing has changed."

"We had a little session and I hope the problem is resolved, but I don't know if it is," Hunter said.

Ellis stood up on the team bus Sunday when the Rangers arrived in Bloomington, Minn., and encouraged the players to band together and go to the hotel bar. "I'm going ... Who is going with me?" Ellis asked.

Hunter told Ellis to "sit down and shut up."

Ellis later said, "He (Hunter) is Hitler but he ain't gonna make no lampshade out of me. I'm going to be the biggest thorn in his neck he has ever had."

Hunter admitted that Ellis' challenging of his authority "poses some morale problems for the team. It makes you wonder why a player is thinking about where he drinks instead of winning the pennant race."

Ellis, who instigated a rule which keeps reporters out of the dressing room until 15 minutes after the game is over, was often in hot water with Pittsburgh Pirates over his outspoken ways toward management.

Ellis predicted that his confrontation with Hunter would lead to the Rangers trading him. "I figure I've got to go," said Ellis.

'Pretty Baby' Pretty Film Without Point

A Movie Review

by Lorraine Locherty

In the opening scenes of Pretty Baby 12-year-old Violet stands in the doorway of her mother's room listening to what seem to be the sounds of a woman having sex. It turns out the woman, Violet's mother, is giving birth. In one swoop director Louis Malle has caught his audience in the web of their own social conditioning.

Pretty Baby , his American film debut, is French director Malle's provocative yet detached look at the world of the child-prostitute as it was in New Orleans in 1917 and still is today in many parts of the world, including North America.

In a career spanning two decades, Malle has explored the screwed-up world of adults and their often hypocritical values through the inexperienced eyes of children on the verge of entrance into that world themselves. Zazie in the Metro was a blackly humorous story about a dirty-mouthed young girl who spends two days with her transvestite uncle in Paris. Murmur of the Heart explored a young boy's incestuous relationship with his mother. Lacombe Lucien , made in 1974 and probably Malle's best known work, is about a teenage French peasant boy who joins the Nazis during the war and goes on a wild summer binge of evil and destruction.

But in spite of his controversial subject matter, Malle is a dispassionate film maker. He prefers to record rather than judge and never allows morals or a sense of right and wrong to complicate the exploration of his topic.

Pretty Baby is taken from the Al Rose book Storyville , about the red-light district of New Orleans as it was just after the turn of the century. Most of the action centres around the inhabitants of one whorehouse, particularly a 12-year-old girl born and raised there who is about to be initiated into the life of a prostitute.

Another principal character in the movie is the famous bordello photographer, E.J. Bellocq. In the movie, although not in reallife, Bellocq eventually marries Violet.

Although banned in Saskatchewan and Ontario, there is nothing prurient, obscene or pornographic about the movie. It is, in fact, too tastefully done to be realistic. The dreamy soft-focus photography of Sven Nykvist (Ingmar Bergman's cinematographer), together with Malle's relaxed and discreet treatment of nudity and sex, have the reverse effect. His whorehouse is a friendly little commune, not at all like the rough, seedy brothels that must have existed in Storyville at that time.

Violet the child-woman is played by the ravishing 12-year-old Brooke Shields, who is so controlled she almost underplays her role. Most of what we see going on in the brothel is from Violet's point of view. Malle shows his preference for visual impact instead of dialogue: he uses many shots of her calm, candid face to convey the child's unprejudiced curiosity about what is going on in the grown-up world around her. Although Violet has precociously picked up the airs of a prostitute, her awkward body and mannerisms are those of a child. Her attempts to emulate her prostitute mother come across as pure parody.

"Honey, I can feel the steam rising right through my dress," she tells one prosective customer," and the remark is ludicrous coming from those 12-year-old lips.

But there is nothing immoral about Violet: she was born and raised in a brothel and matter-of-factly enters the oldest profession because it is the only one she knows. She actually appears to enjoy it, which is probably one of the most scandalous aspects of the movie.

When virginal Violet is auctioned off to the highest bidder she is as excited as a debutante being presented to society. Malle uses her as a vehicle to display the social taboos that make hypocrisy a part of adult life. At one point her mother, played well by Susan Sarandon, expresses her yearning for a husband and a life of respectability and one of the other prostitutes replies: "Those respectable people are the ones lying on top of you every night."

Keith Carradine, as Bellocq, is one of the biggest problems the movie has. The audience never quite understands his motivation. His strange sexless relationship with the whores and the fascination that keeps him at the brothel taking their pictures doesn't seem right. In real life Bellocq was an ugly, squat man dedicated to his art, a Toulouse-Lautrec of photography. But Carradine is tall, handsome and looks as if he has better things to do than hang around a whorehouse without sampling the wares. The real Bellocq had passion, but he poured it into his work. Carradine is emotionless; his portrayal lacks depth and as a result, credibility.

In general, the movie suffers from pointlessness. Malle relies too heavily on the camera to make his statements for him and not enough on dialogue. He goes to a great deal of trouble setting a beautiful visual scene, but nothing ever really develops.

The first 15 or 20 minutes in the brothel are engrossing and Malle, a jazz buff, provides plenty of music from Jelly Roll Morton and other ragtime composers of the era. But although one picture is worth a thousand words, an audience soon gets bored without action.

Shields attending Cannes film festival this week

Suicide Soars In West

HALIFAX (CP) — Suicide attempts have increased almost seven times in the western world in the last 20 years from 15 per 100,000 people to 100 per 100,000, Lawrence Wexler, a Yale University epedemiologist, said Wednesday.

Women under 30 are the most vulnerable group, he said.

Traditionally, older persons have been more successful and the new figures mean "dramatic increases in successful suicides amongst women may be evidence 10 years down the road," Wexler told an international health conference here.

He based his comments on a Yale-New Haven Hospital study which reflected general suicide trends in the western world.

The rate varied greatly from one social area to another, Rates were as low as 40 attempts per 100,000 in some groups to 600 in 100,000 for others.

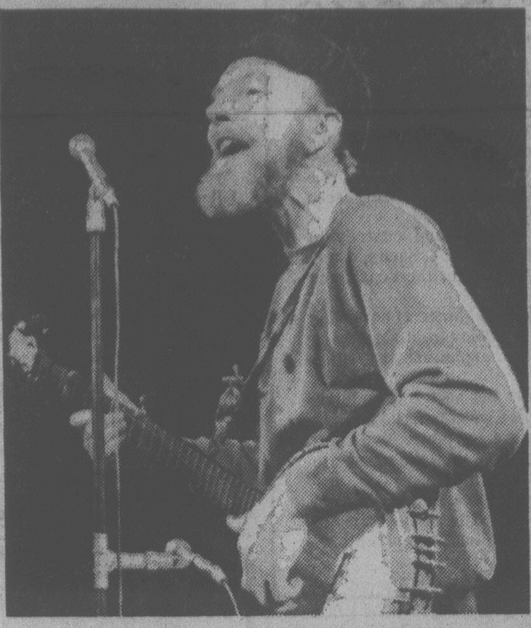
Pete Seeger: Music as weapon in War of Non-violence



SEEGER . . . forcing hate to surrender

LONDON (UPI) — Pete Seeger is probably America's best known folksinger.

He is also, to many, a true folk hero — a living legend who has lifted his voice in song all over the world to protest injustice and to promote harmony among people.

Now nearly 60, the craggy, soft-spoken singer came to London for the first time in 12 years to give a benefit concert for resistance against the Chilean military junta.

And in a hotel room high above a busy London street, he took off his shoes, put up his feet and talked about his life.

"Songs can say things that prose cannot," he said, fingering his banjo. "They have their limitations, though, for the same song can mean different things to different people."

On the body of Seeger's banjo is written, "This machine surrounds hate and forces it to surrender." It's a motto he has been following for 40 years — using music as a weapon in the war of nonviolence.

" 'Political' is one of these words which has so many different definitions that I use it rarely," said Seeger, who despite this has all his adult life been deeply involved in radical causes.

"But," he continued, "a black man in Jersey City told me flatly a year or two ago that whenever you get human beings together you're in politics ... even just to drink a beer. Whenever there's a group of people together — male, female, young, old — in a sense you are affecting the politics of the locality, if nothing else."

In the 1930s and 1940s Seeger was deeply involved in the U.S. labor union movement. In the 1950s he was blacklisted during the anti-Communist witchhunts and indicted by the House Un-American Activities Committee. In the 1960s he was in the forefront of the anti-Vietnam movement. And for 10 years he has helped run a river music boat to help fight pollution of the Hudson River Valley in New York State.

Throughout, he has been active in the struggle for civil rights and — along with close friend Woody Guthrie — became godfather to a whole generation or two of folksingers, including Bob Dylan and Joan Baez.

Seeger said he considered one of his main functions in life was to be a link between all these causes and people.

"Maybe for all humans we should think of ourselves as links in a long chain, and the important thing is not necessarily to be a long link but a strong link," he said.

"I was very fortunate to be able to be one of these links, especially during the frightened '50s.

"I feel a very fortunate musician to have reached people, but on the other hand, what I've been able to do is largely because of the work of a great many other people — the people who have written the songs that I sing, who taught me the music I have been able to put together."

But Seeger himself has composed some of America's best known songs — "Where Have All the Flowers Gone?" "If I Had a Hammer," and countless others. He has also been instrumental in first bringing the songs of others to mass audiences.

" 'Where Have All the Flowers Gone?' is perhaps the closest I have ever come to what I want a song to do," he told a sellout audience at London's Albert Hall which had just sung through all the verses with him. "It's a song you can sing when you're doing something, when you're doing anything."

Seeger says he finds in America today "confusion," largely because of what he calls "the information explosion."

And as for the world, "surely if you back away from it and look at the world the way the astronauts did, it would seem to me that we could agree that it's one big crisis that the human race faces — which either we're going to solve, or it's going to solve us. And we're not going to be able to solve any one part of it without solving the one big thing.

"Whether it's racism, or sexism, or poverty and unemployment, violence, or terrorism, alienation, pollution, and so on — I think I'd like to persuade people it's all one crisis.".

He said, however, that he felt the social consciousness of the 1960s was still very much alive, if fragmented.

Seeger's commitment has not fragmented, however. And even though he says he is now trying to find some way to "retire gracefully," there is little doubt he will continue to use his voice as a hammer of justice, bell of freedom and song of love for as long as he possibly can.

A Reuniting Flight

LOS ANGELES — The small, grey-haired woman on the Los Angeles-bound flight thought the two women sitting next to her looked familiar.

"Are you Rose?" she asked one of them. The woman nodded. "Then you're my sister."

And so, amid tears and shrieks heard throughout the airliner, 77-year-old Stella Bloom of Philadelphia was reunited this week with her two British sisters, whom she had not seem for nearly 55 years.

"It's been non-stop talking ever since," said Mrs. Bloom's daughter, Gloria Allred. She was the perpetrator of the reunion aloft.

Ms. Allred, who has visited her aunts aged 62 and 63 in England, said they wrote last year and said they wanted to visit her mother who lives in Philadelphia.

Unbeknownst to any of them, Ms. Allred, who made the flight arrangements for the sisters to meet in Los Angeles, booked all three on the same flight—in adjacent seats.

TRUDEAUS' MARRIAGE . . . STILL ON THE ROCKS

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Pierre Trudeau and his wife Margaret have been separated for a year and while she has not realized her ambition to become a famous photographer there are no signs they will get back together.

The marriage officially broke up last May 27 in order that Margaret could "pursue an independent career."

In the past year, the 29-year-old mother of three sons, has completed photo assignments for People and other magazines, appeared on The Today Show and made her acting debut with Patrick McGoohan in Kings and Desperate Men.

But despite a busy round of freelance assignments in New York and London, international fame as a professional photographer has eluded her.

Mrs. Trudeau's activities among the so-called international jet-set have been recounted by reporters and columnists.

Although Margaret now lives in Montreal and makes regular visits to Ottawa to see her children at the prime minister's official residences at 24 Sussex Drive and at Harrington Lake, she and Pierre Trudeau are rarely seen together.

Trudeau, 58, retained custody of their children — Justin, 6, Sacha, 4, and Michel, 2 — as part of the separation agreement.

He has defended Margaret as a "fine person who is not being treated fairly by people who are exploiting the situation."

Margaret, for her part, told an interviewer: "It was a good marriage ... but it wasn't working anymore. You can't put off what you want to do because there may not be a tommorrow."

The Trudeaus were wed in Vancouver, B.C. in 1971. The next six years were sometimes stormy and embarrassing for Trudeau.

And Now Here's The Bad News

LOS ANGELES — The bad news for Bonnie De Robertis was that the mechanics estimated it would cost $2,383 to repair her 1975 Rolls-Royce.

The worse news was that it took nine months to complete the job.

The intolerable news, she charged in a lawsuit against the Roy Carver Rolls Royce Agency of Newport Beach, was that the final bill came to $8,426.

She filed suit for $75,000, including compensation for being without her car.

She Claims Nut Firm Nuts

LUTON, England — With a fine eye for a pun, Elizabeth Kovacs intoned: "This company must be nuts."

Elizabeth was a 17-year-old peanut packer for Q Peanuts until she was fired for showing up too early.

She had to admit she was warned. Q told her repeatedly to stop coming to work at 6:30 a.m. when her shift didn't go on stream until 8.

"She disobeyed an instruction while on a temporary contract and we decided not to keep her," said a Q spokesman.

"We applaud our workers who arrive on time. But that means on time — not too early."

Nuts, says Elizabeth, and she's taking the case to an industrial tribune, claiming unfair dismissal.

Liz didn't want to work for Q in the first place. She was completely happy at a pickle-packing plant until the dampness there gave her bad knees.

So, she made the switch. It was great to be able to walk to work in the early morning, she said, just the thing to relieve tension in the joints.

Gleason Admitted To Hospital

CHICAGO — Entertainer Jackie Gleason was admitted to Michael Reese Hospital early today after complaining of chest pains following a performance at a downtown theatre.

Gleason, 62, was listed in fair condition in the hospital's coronary-care unit.

Gleason is appearing in the comedy Sly Fox at the Blackstone Theatre. The play opened last week and was scheduled to run through June 17.

A Simple Birthday . . .

ST. BRUNO, Que. (CP) — "It will be a simple birthday celebration, like any other day really," said Annette Dionne, politely curtailing a telephone interview.

Annette, one of the three surviving Dionne quintuplets, celebrates her 44th birthday Sunday with sisters Cecile and Yvonne in this densely-populated bedroom suburb, their adopted home town, 15 kilometres east of Montreal.

Friends say the three thrive on their present anonymity, far from the gawking tourists, the inquiring cameras and the media exploitation that dominated their early lives after they and their late sisters Emilie and Marie were born on May 28, 1934.

"They want their private life, said Germain Allard, a Montreal finance company executive and Annette's former husband. "They don't want to be bothered.

"They're not like a movie star or a singer who needs the publicity to get more money."

They are estranged from their parents — mother Elzire and father Oliva — who live in a modest grey-brick bungalow near Callander, Ont., 15 kilometres south of North Bay.

The bungalow is near the site of the old famhouse where the quints were born, the first known survivors of such a multiple birth and the instant darlings of a sensation-hungry world. The old house, bought and moved by a local entrepreneur, now stands in North Bay at a site more accessible to tourists.

"They are so fed up with publicity," said a daughter-in-law married to one of the Dionnes' six other children, who asked a recent caller that her name not be used. "They would like to retire gracefully."

The only contacts between the surviving quints and the parents are the Christmas cards they exchange annually.

"But this is very, very, very formal, just to save face," said Allard. "There is no dialogue at all."

Cecile, with four teen-age children, works as a cashier in a St. Bruno supermarket. She and her husband were divorced in 1964, two years after the death from kidney cancer of one of her twin boys at the age of six months.

Nineteen-year-old Emilie died in 1954 of suffocation during an epileptic seizure at convent where she was enrolled as a postulant.

Marie died in a Montreal apartment in 1970, apparently of a blood clot in the brain.

"Their life earlier was very complicated," said Allard. "It was not a happy life at that time in Callander."

In 1934, the first news items simply reported that 26-year-old Elzire had given birth to five "healthy and chirping" girls in a bedroom of the farmhouse under the care of two midwives and the charitable but stern Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe.

When it dawned on the outside world what had happened, tourists, reporters and entrepreneurs converged on the Dionne homestead on the outskirts of Callander, a grittily poor town in Northern Ontario, to catch a glimpse of the quints.

The quints' $30,000 annual earnings from motion-picture appearances and advertisements poured into a trust fund. The last payment on the dwindled fund is due May 28, 1979.

The five sisters left home permanently in 1952. But not until 1965, with publication of their autobiography entitled We Were Five, did they vent their feelings about their parents.

The last group photograph of the surviving quints and their parents was taken at Marie's funeral in 1970. In 1975, when their parents celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary, the three sisters only sent a card.

Speedy One-Man Flight

SEATTLE (UPI) — An attorney is claiming the international record for an around-the-world flight in a single-engine, propeller-driven airplane.

Champagne and a crowd of about 150 family, friends and reporters were waiting at a Boeing Field hangar for Robert Mucklestone when he wheeled his turbo-charged Cessna 210 to a stop at 5:23 p.m. Friday.

Flying alone, Mucklestone went around the world in just under seven days, 13 ½ hours, bettering his pre-flight goal by about one-half hour. He was trying to regain the record he set with his son Peter three years ago when they flew around the world in 12 days, 3 ½ hours.

Two Pueblo, Colo., men set the existing record of 10 days, 21 hours last year.

Mucklestone was exhausted when he arrived.

"I was planning on 35 hours (of sleep on the trip) and I know I didn't even get half of that," he said.

Mucklestone said his immediate plans were to "sleep for quite a while" and "check up on my law practice."

The Games People Play

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The library has checkout cards and a card catalogue and even assesses late fines. On the shelves are such titles as Othello, Shogun, 1776 and Shakespeare.

But there are no books. This library lends out games and it's called, appropriately enough, the Library of Games.

"People need to break out of their fear of buying games," said Frank Briese, who set up the library.

Gamblers Loved It

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (CP) — The newest games in the East kept thousands of eager gamblers busy until dawn today in the green felt world of this resort city's first legal casino.

About 3,000 bettors, many of whom went the entire first 20 hours of casino gambling here, were sent out onto the blustery Boardwalk at first light.

Many had to be ordered away from the slot machines and crap tables when Resorts International Hotel closed its casino at 6 a.m. By law, casinos here must be closed for four hours on each weekend day and six hours on weekdays.

"I'd stay here forever," said a gambler from Pottstown, Pa., who identified himself only as Tony. "I could stay and stay and stay. I'll be here again at 10 a.m. because I can beat blackjack. I know what I'm doing."

Tony insisted he won $3,000 the first day.

The first-day gamblers came and went Friday, but the crowd never thinned. Even at dawn, there were no free seats at tables and the nickel slots still had patrons waiting their turn.

"I'm a casino city baby," exclaimed local hotel worker Rachel Farmer as she kissed a slot machine that gave her $6. "I like to take your money home."

Bob Knauft, a salesman from Cincinnati, said: "We just flew off last night to come here because we enjoy gambling, but we're not losing because we can't get to a table."

Stormy weather, possibly coupled by predictions of a traffic nightmare, apparently kept many long-distance bettors and weekend vacationers away from this small seashore resort as the Memorial Day holiday got under way.

"Bad weather stopped everyone from driving down, but it also drives the people that are here into that casino," Steven Norton, a vice president of Resorts International Inc., said.

Gov. Brendan Byrne and singer Steve Lawrence opened the 3,000 square-metre casino Friday morning. Byrne did not place a bet, but Lawrence opened action at a craps table by dropping $50 in five minutes while photographers recorded each unlucky throw.

Queen Ends German Tour

BREMEN, West Germany (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth of Britain left West Germany on Friday after a five-day state visit, declaring that ties between the two countries have never been stronger.

Her tour was packed with colorful pageantry, but had distinct political undertones.

West German and British officials said it had made a major contribution to strengthening relations between the countries, once bitter enemies, but now partners in the European Common Market and NATO.

The Queen summed up the signifiance of her visit in a luncheon speech in Bremen's Gothic city hall shortly before flying back to Britain.

"The ties which bind us are stronger today than ever before, not only between our governments but between our peoples," she said.

ORYX ARRIVE

TEL AVIV (AP) — Eight long-horned oryx, graceful antelope with swept-back horns not seen in Israel for 2,000 years, have arrived here from the Los Angeles Zoo.

Dominican President Out

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Opposition candidate Antonio Guzman, a moderate leftist, has won the presidency of the Dominican Republic.

The final count Friday of all but two of the country's 84 electoral districts gave Guzman, 67, a 150,000-vote victory over three-term President Joaquin Balaguer. Officials of the government party indicated, however, that they have not given up on attempts to have the entire election annulled.

Under Dominican law, the results do not become official until June 15. Concerned U.S. officials, who have played a pivotal role in the unfolding Dominican political crisis, have said they do not believe the tension that began on election day, May 16, will subside until the inauguration of a new president next August.

Guzman's victory came 11 days after the Caribbean island nation was thrown into turmoil when the pro-Balaguer military forcibly stopped vote counting hours after the polls closed in a short-lived attempt to keep the losing conservative government in power.

The military withdrew after two days of intense domestic and international pressure on the government, including thinly veiled U.S. threats of aid withdrawal and direct appeals by President Carter and other world leaders for respect of the electoral process.

While counting resumed last week, it was slowed by late-arriving returns from the countryside, where Guzman's Dominican Revolutionary Party charged the armed forces were harassing electoral officials.

The government's Reformist Party has subsequently questioned the legitimacy of the vote. In a speech shortly after the military withdrawal, Balaguer said there had been "grave irregularities" in electoral procedure.

The Balaguer government made no concession or comment on Friday's results. But party official Wilfredo Mejia said the Reformists are in the process of collecting identity cards of hundreds of thousands of Balaguer supporters who they allege were intentionally omitted from registration lists and subsequently turned away from the polls.

Egypt Goes After Journalists

CAIRO (AP) — President Anwar Sadat's government is preparing charges against 40 Egyptian journalists for writing articles "detrimental to Egypt's national interests," Cairo newspapers said Friday.

They said the government prosecutor was preparing the cases under a national referendum approved Sunday by 98 per cent of the voters giving Sadat the power to crack down on both left-wing and right-wing opponents.

State-controlled newspapers said 30 journalists living abroad and 10 in Egypt have had articles published or broadcast in foreign countries. No names were given, but the papers said it was known some pro-Communist writers were on the lists.

The charges will be submitted to parliament, which is to pass laws enacting the referendum proposals and setting penalties for violations, the papers said.

The newspaper reports said the 30 Egyptian journalists living abroad have been advised by Egyptian embassies to return home where they will be "have the chance to defend themselves." Those who do not return will be tried in absentia.

Some journalists on the list are working in France, England, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya and Lebanon.

Blind Keep Canes

BALTIMORE (AP) — A federal judge issued a temporary order Friday barring United States airlines from seizing white canes from blind passengers as the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) had ordered them to do.

U.S. District Judge Edward Northrop signed the order after meeting in chambers with lawyers for the FAA and the National Federation of the Blind (NFB). The federation had filed the suit.

The order will remain in effect until at least June 5. No hearing date was set.

The FAA has ordered airlines to take the canes from blind passengers, maintaining that they could become dangerous missiles if trouble occurs in flight.

The NFB said taking away the canes leaves blind passengers helpless in emergencies, and that the canes, usually made of wood or light metal, are no more dangerous than handbags, which may be carried on flights.

"This is a landmark court decision for the blind," said Ralph Sanders, NFB president. "It's a case that comes down to the question of whether the blind are helpless or capable of dealing with emergencies and helping themselves."

People Parks Sprout

BONN (AP) — Pedestrians once again fill the streets of West Germany now that 270 cities have created car-free zones. Urban centres are sprouting greenery-filled "people parks."

The ancient Romans, who mapped out most of the city centres after adding Germany to their far-flung empire, would be proud.

"The number of pedestrian streets and zones has jumped by leaps and bounds in the last few years," said the German Trade and Industry Federation in a recently released report.

Borrowing ideas already developed in the Netherlands, West Germany is putting pedestrian zones in every corner of the country, from Hamburg in the north to Munich in the south. By the end of 1978 a total 412 communities will have installed pedestrian-only zones.

At the same time a national program is converting valuable downtown real estate into parks so that cities and their residents can breathe a little easier.

"They are unique in the world," said Karl Ley, chairman of the Federal Gardeners Federation in Bonn, of the parks featuring outdoor garden shows which attract thousands of tourists.

Some of the exhibits are removed when the show closes but the landscaping and gardens, which take years to prepare, remain as a permanent green haven for the residents.

Stuttgart's Federal Garden Show converts a neglected, overgrown strip between a rail station and a six-lane expressway into the "Windpipe," dubbed that because of the oxygen it supplies,

Hanover had the first garden show in 1951. Bonn, which has boomed from a cluster of villages after the Second World War to a population of 283,000, will stage the next one in 1979.

RED CROSS PROBE SET

SALISBURY (AP) — The International Red Cross will send a Swiss expert in criminology and a specialist in English law to Rhodesia to look into the slaying of two of its officials and their interpreter May 19.

"The Red Cross will do everything to discover the whole truth regarding this triple crime and the identities of the murderers who, for the moment, are unknown," a Red Cross statement said Friday. Rhodesian officials said the trio was ambushed by black guerrillas.

World Bank Aids Poor Search for Oil

By WILLIAM GREIDER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A new and promising frontier for world oil production, potentially larger than the Alaskan and North Sea fields combined, is being developed with financial help from the World Bank.

The frontier lies in roughly 50 of the world's poorer countries, the underdeveloped nations of Africa, Latin America and Asia, which were long-neglected as potential sources for new oil but are now regarded as rich in possibilities.

World Bank officials have announced details of a broad program of lending and technical asistance of up to $500 million a year, intended to help 50 to 60 oil-importing nations become self-sufficient oil-producers in the next decade.

This would greatly ease the financial strains on those nations, which now import as much as 80 percent of their oil at the $13-a-barrel cartel prices. Those countries suffered most when oil prices soared five years ago.

But Third World oil development should also benefit Western industrial nations, like the United States, by easing some of the pressure for increased production and higher prices on Saudi Arabia and other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

According to the World Bank's "cautious" projetions, the less-developed countries are expected to increase their oil production levels from 3.8 million barrels a day to 8.5 million by 1985 and 10.4 million in 1990.

At present, these nations together import about 2 million barrels daily from OPEC producers. By 1990, they are expected to be net exporters, taking care of their own growth in oil consumption and selling 1.5 million to 2 million barrels to the rest of the world.

So far, the bank has made one loan of $150 million to India for the development of an offshore field. By the end of next year, it hopes to have eight projects underway, totaling $500 million, which will be "seed" financing to generate $3 billion to $4 billion in other investment capital.

Bank-assisted projects are under discussion in Bangladesh, Pakistan, Turkey, Thailand, Syria, Tunisia, Egypt, Zaire, Argentina, Colombia, Chad and Bolivia, among others.

"In five years," said Efrain Friedmann, energy expert at the World Bank, "we will be doing twice what we did in the last 30 years."

The new trend rests upon two premises. The high world price engineered by OPEC now makes it possible, even mandatory, for smaller nations to develop less promising exploration areas. And, according to recent studies, these areas in underdeveloped countries have a potential for new oil two or three times greater than the conventional wisdom has long predicted.

"Those things turn around so fast," Friedmann said. The estimates and projections of potential new oil, he added, have historically proven to be "unbalanced on the conservative side."

Mexico is currently the world's startling example of this phenomenon. A few years ago, Mexico was importing oil; now it is developing production and will enter the ranks of major exporters, selling more than 2.5 million barrels a day within a decade.

In the pre-OPEC past, as the World Bank experts explain it, there was little or no incentive for either major oil companies or individual nations to develop their domestic oil and gas.

"Prior to 1970, the world oil market was characterized by a glut in crude oil supplies, mainly from the low-cost discoveries in the Middle East," the bank's report explained. Oil cost $3 a barrel and the major multinational companies spent less than 7 percent of their exploration capital in the non-OPEC developing nations.

The major companies were also discouraged from exploration by political instabilities or nationalistic hostilities; Some nations were content to develop their own fields slowly and exclude the international companies from exploration. Since 1973, that has changed in nations such as Brazil, Argentina, Chile and Colombia.

14 Heroes Recognized

OTTAWA (CP) — Fourteen persons have been awarded medals for acts of heroism, Government House announced Friday.

A news release said they will receive six Stars of Courage, three of them posthumous, and eight Medals of Bravery from Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger during a ceremony later this year at Government House.

Robert Knorr and David Yablonski of Prince George, who drowned July 22, 1977 trying to rescue two canoeists on the Isaac River near Wells, B.C., were awarded two of the Stars of Courage, the second highest bravery decoration.

Andreas Karilou of Larnaca, Cyprus, was also posthumously awarded a Star of Courage. He drowned while trying to rescue Canadian Forces Sgt. Andre Dupont who also drowned during a deep-sea diving exercise off the coast of Cyprus in 1977.

Randy Davey of Napanee, Ont., was awarded a Star of Courage for rescuing five persons from an apartment building fire in March 1977.

Terrance Collins of Aldergrove, B.C., was awarded a Star of Courage for rescuing a two-year-old boy during a fire at the child's home on May 14, 1977.

David Christney of Bamfield was awarded the Star of Courage for his attempt, with the aid of there other crew members on Canadian Coast Guard Lifeboat 104, to rescue four fishermen and a three-man helicopter crew on the reefs off Cape Beale Feb. 28, 1976.

Martin Charles of Nitnat Lake, Robert Amos and Clifford Charles, both of Bamfield, were awarded Medals of Bravery for their role in the rescue operation.

Robert Hynes of Clarenville, Nfld., was awarded the Medal of Bravery for rescuing two children from their burning home in Port Rexton, Nfld., on March 8, 1977.

Steven Folk, 11, of Fort St. John, received the same medal for saving a 14-year-old friend from falling over a 40-foot drop while they were hiking near that town April 10, 1977.

Richard Ulliac, 17, of Edmonton was awarded the medal for attempting to save his cousin and a friend from drowning at Sandhill Lake, Alta., on July 25, 1977.

Todd MacKay, 11, of Port Hardy, received the medal for rescuing his three-year-old brother from a water-filled culvert near their home on Oct. 23, 1977.

Godfrey Savage of Ottawa got the award for rescuing a fellow tenant from their burning home in Ottawa on Nov. 7, 1977.

Since the award's creation in 1972, 319 persons have received the Cross of Valour, the Star of Courage and the Medal of Bravery.

Inuvik: A Town In Cold Storage

INUVIK, N.W.T. (CP) — A number of businesses have left and at least 10 others are up for sale. Unemployment is up, especially among the native people. Nobody seems to want $2.5 million worth of developed land.

It's the aftermath of the federal government's decision to reject construction of a natural-gas pipeline through the Mackenzie Valley. Instead, Ottawa opted for the $10-billion Alaska Highway route from Alaska to the lower United States through the Yukon, British Columbia and Alberta.

"The pipeline decision has had a very, very negative impact on our community," said Mayor Jim Robertson, whose own business, a travel agency, suffered a 25-per-cent drop in revenue.

"There are no more oil companies around here. Gulf Oil has left. Sun Oil is leaving shortly. Imperial is down to one, perhaps two rigs. Petro-Can has left—they were not here that much anyway, but they are gone too."

Among the departed businessmen is Len Cardinal, one of two major contractors. He left with a convoy of 18 trucks and all his equipment.

The other major contractor, Milan Carnogursky, spends five or six hours a day skiing—"I have nothing else to do."

Carnogursky said a year ago he had about 30 men working. All of them have been laid off. He said Cardinal's departure meant a loss of 20 jobs and an annual payroll of $500,000.

That hurts in a community of 3,000.

"I'm sorry to see him go but the way it is, this town isn't big enough for the two of us," Carnogursky said. "Maybe he is the smart one."

Robertson and other Inuvik residents were surprised by the pipeline decision.

"Most of us expected that the Mackenzie Valley pipeline would go ahead."

The mayor said the town's remaining hope of benefitting from oil and gas development is that a Dempster lateral, along the new Dempster Highway, would be built to connect Mackenzie delta gas reserves with the Alaska Highway pipeline—as promised by pipeline backers.

Because the Mackenzie Valley pipeline would have been connected to Mackenzie delta reserves, Robertson said, Inuvik, largest community in the delta, had grand plans for a boom situation.

'The town borrowed $2.5 million from the federal government to prepare subdivisions for trailers, apartments and houses, "partly at the urging of the government."

"Now we have to pay the $2.5 million back, plus interest at 8½, 8¾ per cent, but we are not selling land to pay it back with. We want the federal government to take the land and carry it themselves."

Robertson said so far this year, 114 business licences have been issued—down 27 from last year. Numerous projects planned by government and industry came to a halt.

"Having said that, the pipeline decision hasn't meant death for Inuvik. The Dempster Highway will be opening, so we will have a new industry with tourists coming in overland. Inuvik is a government centre and come hell or high water, the government will be here.

"So of all the communities along the (Mackenzie) river to Hay River, I'll say we're probably the most fortunate."

Robertson said some businesses went bankrupt because they were misled by the government.

"The government said: Small businessmen in the Northwest Territories, go into business so you can be prepared to get a piece of the action. People like Cardinal went into business, and then the rug was pulled from under them; and these people whom the government had encouraged are now sitting home with a lot of debt."

Bodies Found

AOSTA, Italy (AP) — The bodies of four Italian climbers missing for five days were found Friday buried under an avalanche on Mount Rosa, one of the Alps' tallest peaks. Searchers said the four, all from the city of Mantua, were found with the help of dogs. The 4,560-metre peak is near the Swiss border in northern Italy.

Racism Fills Books?

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto board of education advisory committee Friday asked that 14 secondary school textbooks be withdrawn from use because they are negative and prejudicial to Asians.

The South Asia Origins Liaison Committee told the board it is basing its stand on a study which claims the books show India and its people as inferior.

Suwanda Sugunasiri, a post-graduate student who researched the study, said the books all have a condescending attitude which leads to racism.

"It says to people from India, 'You and your society are inferior, so you aren't entitled to equality.' "

The committee report says words consistently used to describe India and its people include: archaic, superstitious, inefficient, unscrupulous and illiterate.

In comparison, the report says such words as advanced, civilized, humane, progressive, and rich are used to describe the West and its people.

The committee says it wants the ministry of education to review all social science textbooks for evidence of similar bias against other minority groups.

Vote Cancelled

MANILA (AP) — President Ferdinand Marcos has announced there will be no local elections in the Philippines this year because of "disruptions and divisions" in the April 7 national election. A palace spokesman said Friday Marcos felt the turmoil from the National Assembly ballot "raised doubts on the capacity of the nation to endure another election while in the midst of a crucial political transition."

THE GREAT "BOY"

Giovanni Leonardo was born in Calabria, Italy, in 1542. He was sent to Rome to study law but found chess more to his liking and soon attracted public attention by beating all the leading players in Rome. Because of his youthful appearance he was nicknamed "Il Puttino", (The Boy).

In 1560, Ruy Lopez, a Spanish priest and chess immortal, visited Rome, and having heard of Leonardo's reputation, sought him out and challenged him. On two successive days, Lopez beat Leonardo. Disliking defeat, Leonardo went to Naples where he studied chess for two years.

During this time, he learned that his brother had been captured by pirates who were demanding a ransom of 200 crowns. Discovering that the pirate captain played chess, Leonardo challenged him to play for high stakes — and succeeded in not only rescuing his brother but in making quite a sum of money for himself.

Ten years later, he finally went to Madrid to challenge his old rival, Ruy Lopez. King Philip II was present, and when Leonardo won, rewarded him with gold, jewels and furs.

From Spain, the victorious Leonardo went to Portugal, where he beat El Morro, the strongest player at the court of King Sebastian who, like Philip, rewarded him extravagantly and even gave him the title of Knight Errant.

But what had proved a triumphant life ended in a tragic death, for Leonardo had earned not only riches but the enmity of those less gifted. In 1587, aged 45, he was poisoned and died.

Jobless Can be Choosy

NEW YORK (UPI) — Unemployed job hunters have rejected offers to return to the corporate world because a McDonald's isn't within walking distance or the boss is three inches too short, according to a personnel expert.

"In fact," observes Robert Half, "their strange attitudes and demands may make many applicants their own worst enemies."

The president of Robert Half Personnel Agencies, which has more than 50 offices in the United States, said recent conversations with corporate personnel executives have turned up many cases of eccentric behavior among American pavement pounders.

For example, a Chicago credit manager refused to accept a job with a large retail chain after lunching with the corporate vice president, who ordered two glasses of chablis. The credit manager concluded he didn't want to rub professional shoulders with someone "who obviously had a drinking problem."

A Milwaukee accountant remained in the ranks of the unemployed after insisting he couldn't start a coveted job for a month — on his astrologer's advice.

A financial executive nixed a position with a San Francisco manufacturer after the company said it would not pay for his weekly visits to an acupuncturist.

A Milwaukee executive, who had visions of driving a Cadillac Seville on the job, decided he didn't want to work for a firm that only came up with a Chevrolet as a company car.

A Boston cashier said "no" to a slot in a branch bank because it was too far from a McDonald's to fill her lunchtime job specification.

A Los Angeles financial analyst turned his back on a film production company because his prospective boss wore bow ties and, therefore, couldn't be trusted.

A 5-foot-9-inch Houston woman closed the door on a spot at a computer programming company because her would-be supervisor was only 5-foot-6-inches. She told the company she "couldn't respect a man" shorter than she.

Half says he was "understandably relieved" to find that these job candidates were not referred by his offices, which specialize in financial executive, accounting and data processing employment.

And although he hasn't yet heard of applicants refusing a job because of four-week vacations or inflated salaries, Half maintains that "he wouldn't be too surprised if it did happen."

HOT SELLERS

TORONTO (CP) — It's easier to sell expensive Oriental carpets today in a flagging economy than it was in the 1950s and '60s although the average price of an authentic Oriental carpet has increased greatly in recent years, says Maurice Lidchi, head of the Lidchi International Group.

He said in a recent interview Persian rugs are handmade in oil-producing countries.

"When the price of oil went up, the cost of labor went up and so did the cost of rugs," said Lidchi, who was here to visit one of his company's stores.

He said that young people today are interested in beautiful things, partly as worthwhile investments, but also "for embellishment, not just profit."

"There's a return to the feeling of the 20s when beautiful things were sought as a part of life.

People today "want an item for its personality.

Carless Sunday Vote

GENEVA (Reuter) — The Swiss began voting in a national referendum Friday to decide whether to ban Sunday motoring once a month, extend the scope of legal abortions, and push clocks ahead during the summer.

The price of bread and university aid also are being put to a countrywide vote this weekend under Switzerland's referendum system.

The polls stay open until Sunday, with the results expected the same evening.

At least four times a year the electorate of 3.4 million is asked to settle problems which have split the ruling coalition, might affect the constitution, or have been raised by citizens.

Nine engineering students launched the campaign to ban private motor vehicles, private aircraft and motor boats on the second Sunday of each month to try to save energy and reduce pollution.

The government opposed the proposal, saying that about 100,000 foreign cars came into Switzerland each Sunday. It said the ban would reduce the annual Swiss consumption of energy by less than one per cent.

The Swiss government asked for powers to introduce summer time because neighboring West Germany, Switzerland's major trading partner, is considering switching to the daylight saving system already common in France and Italy.

But many farmers from Zurich, supported by voters from mainly rural areas, objected, arguing it would extend their working day.

Swiss authorities also are asking voters to approve a law allowing abortion for women in social as well as medical difficulties, and to increase central government aid to universities.

White Elephant Mirabel Symbol

MONTREAL (CP) — Mirabel International Airport, which is expected to lose $50 million in this fiscal year, has a white elephant as its new symbol.

The federal transport department has launched an advertising campaign featuring a logo in which a smiling white elephant is shown leaping over the words: "The airport where the future is present."

The large four-color ads appeared in daily newspapers Thursday in Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and Winnipeg. They eventually are to be placed in newspapers in 12 Canadian cities with direct flight connections to Mirabel.

Vince Paquette, the department's regional public affairs director, said the white elephant symbol was chosen because it represents the public's image of Mirabel.

"Most newspapers have long been depicting us as a white elephant so, since we already have an image, why change it?" Paquette said.

"We know there's a risk factor involved, but we think people will see the good humor of it. I think the risk factor is rather small."

Mirabel lost $61.1 million in the 1976-77 fiscal year and another $53.6 million in the 1977-78 fiscal year which ended March 31.

Guards Killed Over Watches

LINZ, Austria (AP) — Two Austrian border guards were killed Friday in a shootout with two Viennese men who were stopped at the border with a suitcase filled with contraband wristwatches from West Germany, officials said.

One of the men was killed and the other arrested 2½ hours later in a second shootout when police stopped their car at another road crossing, police said.

Disneyland Olympics?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A city councilman proposed Thursday that Los Angeles, casting about for some way not to lose either the 1984 Olympics or the city's shirt, consider the posibility of turning the games over to a proven moneymaker:

Disneyland.

The amusement park did not seem interested.

As city officials and pro- and anti-Olympic factions wrangled and manouevred, caught between the conflicting demands of the voters and the International Olympic Committee, Councilman Bob Ronka came up with his suggestion.

Although Ronka made the proposal with what appeared to be a straight face, he is one of the leaders of the Council's "Olympic skeptic" faction.

He suggested the city back off and turn the Olympic field over to the local businessmen who know how to make money off entertainment — a movie studio, such as the giant Universal Pictures, or Disneyland.

He discussed his proposal with Lou Wasserman, head of Universal Studios, and Don Tatum of Disneyland.

Ronka said it would make "an interesting contrast," after Russia hosts the 1980 Games in Moscow, if American private enterprise hosted the 1984 Games in Los Angeles.

"One thing the Lou Wassermans and the Disneys of the world can do is run their organizations a lot more efficiently than the commissar of wheat in the Ukraine," he said.

Wasserman agreed to discuss the proposal next week, Ronka said, but Tatum had reservations, worrying about the difficulties of dealing with the IOC.

"We are now at an impasse," the councilman said. "The International Olympic Committee is totally brittle, and the way things are going right now we aren't going to have the Games."

Although Los Angeles was considered a shoo-in for the 1984 games — it was the only city to bid for them — pressures from the voters and taxpayers have led to an apparent impasse.

To head off voter discontent, city officials promised the games would cost the taxpayers nothing, then ran afoul of an IOC rule requiring the host city to assume all financial responsibility for the games.

Neither side budged. The IOC this month awarded the city the games "conditionally," warning that if Los Angeles does not agree to its terms by July 31, the IOC will look for another city.

City officials and Olympic supporters have been searching ever since for some formula to satisfy both sides.

Veteran Lutheran Pastor Dies at 73

SQUAMISH (CP) — Funeral services were held this week for Rev. Carl F. Baase, pastor of Mount Calvary Church in New Westminster from 1942 to 1971, who died Sunday after 49 years of service with the Lutheran Church in British Columbia. He was 73.

At the time of his death, he was pastor at the Faith Lutheran Church in this community about 60 kilometres north of Vancouver where he had served since 1975.

Baase had been president of the Alberta-British Columbia district of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod from 1952 to 1961 when the Lutheran Church of Canada was formed.

He was also one of the founders of the Creation Science Society of Canada. Shortly after he was ordained in New York where he was born, Baase moved to B.C. to serve in Creston and Kelowna and their outlying stations before moving to the New Westminster parish. He became in 1958 a Canadian citizen.

The clinic has been arranged to mark Canoe Safety Week May 28-June 3.

M2 A Program For 'Real Losers'

TORONTO (CP) — Jim first met his best friend Bill in prison. Jim, a thief and con man, had spent 20 years in and out of prison.

His friend Bill is a successful Toronto insurance executive, but is also a member of M2 (Man to Man), a program in which volunteers befriend prisoners.

Harry Nigh, M2's co-ordinator said in an interview: "We look for the real losers, the forgotten guys, the ones who are not getting visits, the resourceless."

Provincial figures indicate that about 30 per cent of prisoners who leave Ontario cells are back in prison after two years.

Nigh said he doesn't have his own statistics, but he's sure M2's friends are doing better than that.

When Jim first met Bill, he said he expected to be preached at.

"I wasn't," he said in an interview. "Instead, Bill listened."

For three years, Jim has been out of jail and has married and set up a home.

He worked in a Toronto office, a job Bill helped him get, and now works in another Ontario city, in a program to help young offenders.

"Bill is still my best friend," he said. "We talk by phone regularly, go out to dinner with our wives, visit."

Such stories aren't unusual.

M2, which has 60 unpaid visitors, is just one of a growing number of programs in which ordinary citizens work closely with individuals in trouble, to establish trust and friendship.

M2's rule for sponsorship says the sponsor will be a friend, not a banker, landlord or employer. He comes to listen, to try to understand, and to accept another person.

Nigh says it is important for the volunteers to say: "Look, you're my friend and you're worth something."

Many convicts, Nigh said, are crippled by a deep sense of worthlessness.

But he said what's being done by M2 and other organizations, such as the John Howard Society, is only a drop in the bucket.

There are 6,000 people in Ontario institutions at any one time; 70,000 go through in a year. M2's volunteers can deal with only 60.

"What's needed is a wholesale re-ordering of priorities by all of us, to get the men working in the community, to get the community into the institutions," said Nigh.

"We need a one-on-one relationship for every person."

ART ON BLOCK

LONDON (CP) — High taxation is blamed for a rush of owners of stately homes to the auction rooms of Britain, and sales of art treasures have topped 500,000 in the last few months.

The Duke of Northumberland recently sold an emerald and diamond brooch for 250,000 at Sotheby's famous auction house. The Earl of Stair sold antique English furniture, old master paintings, clocks, watches and 18th-century pistols for almost 175,000.

Treasures from stately Warwick Castle were sold by Lord Brooke, son and heir of the seventh Earl of Warwick. The Earl of Scarborough sold treasures from Lumley Castle at Christie's auction rooms for more than 23,000.

An original sword and crossbow, believed to have been used at the Battle of Hastings in 1066, was sold for 36,000 at Christie's by Viscountess Scarsdale of Kedleston Hall. Lord Cobham of Hagley Hall also parted with some family treasures to pay the tax collector.

Historical groups are concerned that many of these treasures will later be sold abroad. Despite export controls, the department of education and science says the known loss of important works of art to Britain now reaches about one a month.

"The sale of these treasures is the result of confiscatory rates of income tax, followed by capital transfer tax and capital gains tax," said Hugh Leggatt, secretary of Britain's Heritage in Danger society.

"In addition, there now is the threat of a wealth tax. And, whatever the government says to the contrary, inflation still is rampant in Britain.

Many art lovers were concerned over the sale of prints by Pablo Picasso at prices ranging from 4,000 to more than 60,000. At Sotheby's in London, a work by the French 19th-century novelist Balzac entitled Le Chef d'Oeuvre Inconnu, with 13 etched plates by Picasso, was sold for 4,000.

"While many of these treasures are bought by people in Britain, there is no guarantee they will not later be taken out of the country," said a member of the Heritage in Danger society.

Bio-dex

By Ken J. Michaels

Your computerized biorhythm

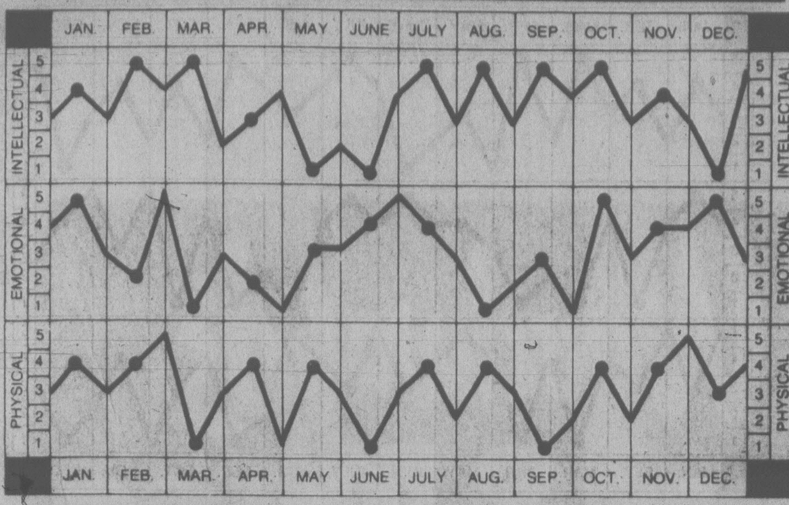
Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	You will probably not see things as they really are, and this could hurt.
11-15 Positive Cycle-	A fellow worker or friend needs your help. Now's the time to provide it.

On low emotional days, try taking a break. Movies are better than ever these days and I make a point of going as often as possible. Good movies help me to forget about the "real world" for an hour or two. They help me to turn off and tune out, something I believe we should all do from time to time. As soon as you finish reading this, turn to the entertainment pages. Pick a good movie and have that well-earned break.

Common ₵ents

By KATE MacQUEEN

Before your hired help comes to cut grass, wash windows or whatever else needs to be done, have all supplies on hand and in one spot. If you don't, you're wasting money getting ready to start when you pay by the hour.

Look for children's inexpensive coloring books when you need patterns for anything from appliques on jeans or pajamas to woodcuts. You'll find more patterns for less money than one packaged pattern.

You may be pleased that your electric watch's battery has lasted well over a year, but you should also know that a year is all the battery should be in your watch. An expert watch repairman warns that the battery begins to leak after a year's use, and this can damage the watch works. It's worth the $2 or $3 a year for a new battery just to protect a good watch.

Ban Lifted

NEW DELHI (AP) — India's prohibition drive has received its first setback. A court has lifted the ban on liquor and marijuana in seven of 56 districts or counties of Uttar Pradesh, the country's most populous state. "There was wild jubilation among those who had been denied boozing since the first (April)."

Embroidery Traced Back to 1000 BC

Just recently I had to do some research on embroidery and a fascinating story unfolded which I though I would pass on. Many of you write and tell me how interested you are with the history of the various crafts.

Like other crafts, no one can say when embroidery was invented, where or by whom. It was being done centuries ago. In Egypt, carvings and paintings, especially those in the tombs, show that garments, couch covers, hangings and tents were decorated with embroidery, and since even foreigners are portrayed in ornate clothes, the art of embroidery must have been developed in other countries as well.

The Old Testament books of Exodus and Exekiel mention gold plate and wire, similar to that being used today, as being worked on fine linen in rich colors for ceremonial garments. Embroidery is thought to have been worked in China as early as 1000 B.C. and mention is made of these traditional garments in writings of 600 B.C.

Quillwork of the North American Indians and the decoration of barkcloth by African tribes may also represent primative origins of embroidery. The dry climate of Peru has preserved some woollen embroideries which are credited with belonging to the Inca period immediately preceeding Cortes' invasion of 1519.

The different styles in which this art of embroidery was executed depended on the materials available and the local culture, evolving in different parts of the world.

KNIT& CHAT

The Bayeux Tapestry is an amazing example of embroidery which was worked around 1100 A.D. and can still be seen today in a small town in Normandy.

I have seen this particular piece and it is an enlightening work of art for its time as it records the landing in England of William the Conqueror and the Battle of hastings in 1066.

A lovely crocheted lacey dress can be made either long for christening or short for everyday wear. A very beautiful dress for a very special occasion, it is both simple and quick to crochet.

To order the dress, this week's pattern No. 0278, send 75 cents, plus a stamped, self-addressed return envelope, a long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat, 486 Montford Dr., Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Que. Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and allow about two weeks for normal delivery.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am so upset I hardly know how to start this letter. While straightening up my teenage daughter's room, I came across a letter from a friend of hers in another state. I read it, partly out of curiosity, and partly to determine if it was something that could be discarded.

I was horrified at the filthy language, and also at the girl's delight in having found a theatre that shows only dirty movies!

This letter also described family possessions and "vacations," but Abby, I know the girl's parents and correspond with them, and this girl was writing lies.

What should I do? Now I suspect that my daugher must be responding to these letters in equally filthy language, and since this girl is my daughter's best friend, I must assume that my daughter's tastes run toward dirty movies, too.

Don't these kids know that filling their minds and mouths with garbage will do them no good?

Should I write to this girl's mother and tell her to talk with her daughter? Should I talk with my daughter and tell her what I've learned? Or are we to late to shape our children's morals once they've reached their teens?

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: If you have done your best to shape your daughter's morals, you need not consider yourself a "failure." Some teenagers feel "big" and grown-up using gutter language, exaggerating and even lying a little for effect, but that doesn't mean they are "no good." If they have been properly brought up (and even the best-reared children sometimes go through this stage), they will outgrow it.

At the appropriate time, subtly warn your daughter that mucking around in the lower registers of speech and entertainment can be habit forming. In the meantime, keep the avenues of communication open between you and your daughter, and don't shake her confidence in you by letting her know that you were snooping. You were, you know.

DEAR ABBY: How does a father who has excelled in sports all his life adjust to a 14-year-old son who has never shown even a normal interest in sports?

I realize that not all boys can be great athletes, but my son has the build for it, and the co-ordination, too. He could be really good if he wanted to, but he's lazy, and he isn't competitive in anything.

I have done my best to get him interested in sports ever since he was old enough to hold a ball, Abby, but it never caught on. Believe me, it's not easy to be a good father to a boy like this. Any suggestions?

SAD DAD

DEAR DAD: Yes, lay off. A "good" father forgets himself and thinks of his son. He then encourages the boy to grow in the direction he seems inclined.

By HARRIET HART

It is usually the sum total of minor things that make the difference in the look of a knitted garment.

The leaflet How to Know a Good Garment offers dozens of helpful hints. For instance, when you cast on, leave a length of yarn long enough to sew up the seam. Leave another length of yarn when you cast off after completion of your work.

When you join a new ball of yarn, always join at the edges of the work where the seams will be. If you use a circular knitting needle, splice the yarn carefully when you make a join.

The leaflet also recommends that the ribbed border of any garment should be firm but elastic. To achieve this, use needles two sizes smaller than those used for the body of the garment.

Before you start a garment, knit a small sample piece in stocking stitch. Measure this carefully. If you are getting more than the number of quoted stitches per inch, try a larger size needle.

If you want to alter the size of a garment, adjust the tension. A difference of half a stitch per inch usually makes an over-all difference of one size in the garment.

With your request for the leaflet How to Knit a Good Garment, please enclose a large (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Patons and Baldwins (Canada) Ltd., 1001 Roselawn Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Dangerous. . .to the Fly

Dr. Frank Miller

The Wonderful World of ANIMALS

DEAR DR. MILLER: I couldn't believe my eyes the other day when I saw Goldie, my canary, snatch a little fly off its perch and swallow it. I read that canaries, being seed eaters, don't often do that sort of thing. Is it dangerous? — C.F.

DEAR C.F.: Only to the fly . . .

DEAR DR. MILLER: I read an incredible story about elephants who bury their dead and guard the graves. Are these true facts? — D.T.

DEAR D.T.: The "facts" may be padded a bit around the edges but basically there is something substantial to them. For example: Elephants do form strong bonds and when friend or relative dies the survivors do mourn. An elephant may on occasion cover the deceased friend with branches or dirt but grave-digging is not consistently practised. A passed-away pachaderm is often guarded by a close friend or relative but the pressures of daily living make such periods of devotion to the departed comparatively brief.

DEAR DR. MILLR: I just discovered an advantage to having your pet rat white. It's easy to find fleas on him. Two of them. I killed them both and was happy. For a minute. Then suddenly it struck me. Rat fleas carry bubonic plague, don't they? Am I doomed? I don't feel like it yet. Mother says if I get any kind of ache or pain I have to go to the doctor and can't wait for your reply. But I thought I'd write anyway. — V.A.

DEAR V.A.: Point one: Bubonic plague rarely dooms human victims who get proper medical treatment early. (2) Since pet rats rarely come in contact with wild rats, any fleas a pet might acquire would not likely be plague transmitters. (Most pet rat fleas come from cats or dogs.) Obviously, a newly acquired "pet" wild rat would be a horse of another color and its fleas could be dangerous carriers.

Shoulders, Shoulders, They Mutter

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times

PARIS-What thousands of fashion followers are muttering as they criss-cross the city to see the new fashions for next fall and winter unveiled in chic hotels and circus tents are "shoulders, shoulders, shoulders."

The prevalence on wide shoulders even outweighs the military themes that French designers seem to be taking far less seriously than their Italian counterparts. Sure, there's a goodly amount of khaki, olive drab and fatigue green tramping up and down the runways, but the invaders look as if they came from outer space, not from over the hill. The helmet-and-goggles kind of accessories are reminiscent of the old couture days of Pierre Cardin and Andre Courreges in the 1960s.

In the case of Kenzo, darling of the fashion groupies scratch all of the above. He is sui generis, He does not present fashion shows. He plans happenings, arousing ecstasy in the beholders. The Beatles and the Rolling Stones had the same sort of effect in concert halls.

Nobody wanted to leave after his opening show. The audience of about 3,000 was on its feet screaming and applauding in the tent set up near the Palais de Congres for the show as if they wanted a re-run. The beat of Sergeant Pepper's band filled the huge space.

The clothes were as happy and varied as those in a circus and there was even a horse with a bareback rider on the runway. She was in gold sequins and white tulle. The rider, that is.

Tent-like baby dresses were reproduced for big girls in changeable taffeta; church vestments were the source of velvet dresses, trousers were all pegged and some, in herring-bone tweed, had jackets that were cut-aways—short in front and had tails at back. Army clothes had peasant embroidery and the cotton flannel used for children's night-gowns appeared in dresses. Everything ended with what might have been meant as a royal wedding—a red carpet was rolled out just before, and the participants wore crowns and tiaras. It was "Alice in Wonderland Goes to Paris" and some of the clothes will make their way into the mainstream of fashion. Such energy cannot be damned.

Ideal Cigarette is None

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I've tried every which way to give up smoking cigarettes and just can't. I'm looking for the ideal cigarette but I don't understand all the numbers about "mg. tars" and "mg. nicotine." — Mr. T. H.

Dear Mr. H.

The "ideal" cigarette is one that contains no tobacco, no tars, no nicotine, no pollutants, no smoke, no burning paper and no carbon nonoxide. You'll never find it.

The numbers game of tars and nicotine is wishful thinking. There are so many other destructive factors in the whole equation of smoking tobacco that whatever comfort one may get from the relative merits of one cigarette as against another is really not too meaningful.

Notice that I mention carbon monoxide. This deserves special emphasis because it is rarely mentioned as a health threat. Yet smoking does increase the amount of carbon monoxide in the blood stream and prevents the red blood cells from carrying the proper amount of oxygen necessary to vitalize the tissues of the body. So important is this factor that greater attention is now being paid to the danger of inhaling "the other fellow's smoke" when you are not a smoker.

Legislation everywhere is blossoming to prevent the non-smoker from being caught in the trap of another person's habit.

You are not unique in your inability to stop smoking. I am certain that you have not exhausted all of the effective methods that are available today. Work at it and you will find that you, too, can have the albatross of endangered health lifted from your chest.

Can you believe me when I say that the worse thing that's happened to me is that I've lost my sense of smell? I'm miserable about it. My taste, too, is affected in everything I eat. It all tastes like sawdust. How can I go about finding the reason for this? — Mrs. E. C.

Dear Mrs. C.:

Yours is a complex problem that has baffled doctors everywhere. Loss of taste and smell, once thought of as an unimportant complaint, is now being recognized as being more than just a nuisance.

So important is it, as a matter of fact, that the United States Army, at the Natick Research and Development Command in Natick, Massachusetts, is concentrating its research on this significant problem.

Penetrating Stain Can Outlast Paint

By A. J. Hand

One of the biggest struggles a homeowner faces is keeping the paint on his house in good shape. Modern paints are remarkable in their ability to stand up to the weather. Still, despite constant improvement over the years, paints can still crack, peel, chip and blister.

That's why more and more homeowners, builders and architects are turning to penetrating stains instead of paints. Unlike paints — which form a film on the surface of your house — these stains soak into the wood. They become part of that wood and that makes them proof against cracking, peeling, blistering and chipping.

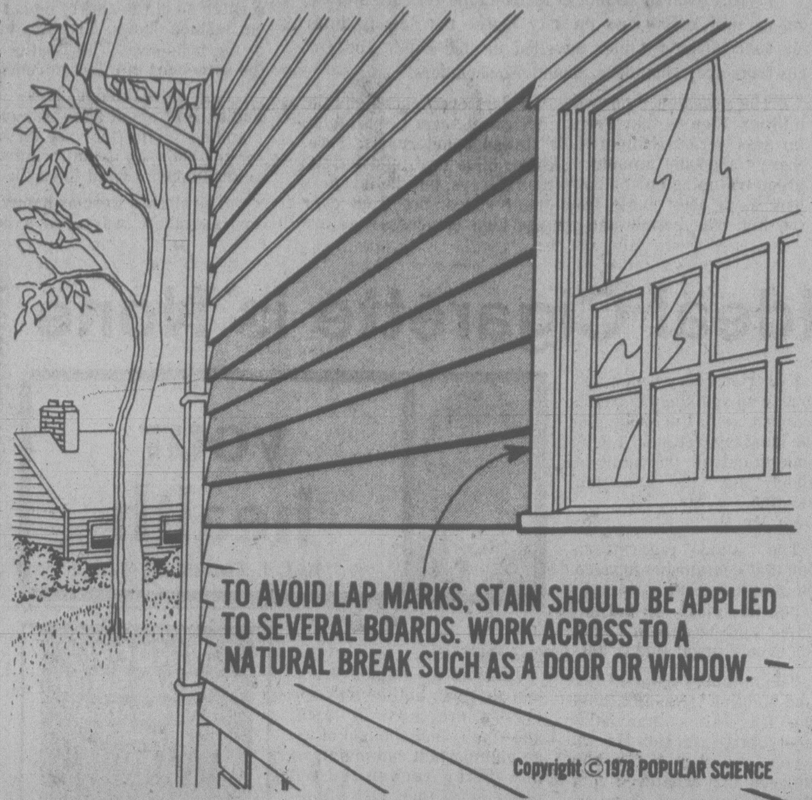
Of course these stains are not permanent. They will wear away in time. In fact, they may hold up only three years the first time they are used on fresh smooth wood. But since there are no chips and other defects, refinishing is easy. Just put on another coat and forget about scraping, sanding, and the other preparations that often go with repainting.

Refinishing has another advantage. After the first coat has weathered for a few years, the wood is much more absorbent. Now you can double coat it and the stains will penetrate deeper than it did the first time you stained. As a result, the stain may last 10 years or more after refinishing. That's good service.

Penetrating stain has other advantages. It gives a natural look. It is exceptionally durable on rough-textured wood, and on horizontal surfaces such as decks and railing. It is cheaper than paint. It won't trap moisture in wood, and it works as well on flat grain wood as on edge grain.

Disadvantages? Your color choice is limited; white is impossible. There's less pigment than in paint, so the wood gets less protection from the sun. Siding must be put up with aluminum or stainless nails to prevent rust staining. The stain will show ugly lapmarks if you apply it incorrectly and it can only be applied over itself or to bare wood.

When buying, be sure to get a semi-transparent stain. There are opaque stains — also sold by major paint and stain makers — but they don't penetrate as deeply as semi-transparent stains. They tend to form a surface film and are thus more like paints than stains. They have their uses, but they are not to be confused with penetrating stains.



TO AVOID LAP MARKS, STAIN SHOULD BE APPLIED TO SEVERAL BOARDS. WORK ACROSS TO A NATURAL BREAK SUCH AS A DOOR OR WINDOW.

Royal Seal of Approval

By SUSAN ANDERSON
New York Times

LONDON — Airwick, bagpipes, milking machines, polo sticks and Hardy Amies don't seem to have much in common. But they all have royal warrants, the impressive coats of arms of the royal family carrying the words, "By appointment to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth."

This prestigious royal seal of approval also has been given by the Duke of Edinburgh, the Queen Mother, the late Kings George V and VI, the late Queen Mary and the late Duke of Windsor when he was Prince of Wales. Royal coats of arms are emblazoned on a range of products from toilet-bowl cleaners to creamed horse-radish, on shopfronts and on the labels of craftsmen who serve the royal family.

There are 808 royal warrant holders at the moment; at the end of the year, the warrants for both the deceased kings and Queen Mary will finally expire. Royal warrants are reviewed after 10 years and occasionally revoked when the royal family no longer deals with a particular company.

HONI
PENSE
By Appointment
TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
WHIP & GLOVE MAKERS

Hawes and Curtis, a subsidiary of Turnbull and Asser, has a royal warrant from Prince Philip, for whom it has been making suits and uniforms for more than 20 years. "You've got to work bloody hard to get it," said Edward Watson, the company's managing director and president of the Master Tailor's Association. "Craftsmen must earn their warrants, whereas with products it's just passed along."

When Prince Philip wants a suit, his valet calls Watson, who sends over fabric swatches. The Prince, who is not influenced by trends, prefers gray and blue and comfort before style.

"Initially I went to the palace to measure him, but he hasn't altered a fraction in 20 years," said Mr. Watson.

After the suit is made, Watson travels to whatever royal residence the Prince is at, to fit the royal body. "I always wear a bowler hat," Mr. Watson confided. "A gentleman is not properly dressed without a hat."

Watson began making suits for Prince Philip when the Prince was 9 years old, and hopes eventually for a royal warrant from his client.

A royal warrant is both an honor and a moneymaker. "It's the hallmark of craftsmanship," Watson said, "and it has brought a 50 percent increase in business." And many warrant holders, including Watson, are invited to the Queen's garden party.

At the moment there is some controversy over royal warrants on products disapproved of by the government — namely cigarettes. Three companies, including the American-owned Benson & Hedges, have warrants from the Queen and the Queen Mother. The crests are displayed prominently on the packets, which also bear a government health warning.

Warrants do not necessarily mean that a product is used by the Queen. The Queen does not smoke; the cigarettes are simply supplied to the royal household. But when it was revealed recently that the last four monarchs died from the effects of smoking, Renee Short, a member of Parliament, asked the Health Minister to request that the Queen withdraw the warrants. The minister refused.

B.C.'s French Disappearing?

OTTAWA (CP) — The assimilation rate of francophones in British Columbia is very high and there is a risk they might disappear, Secretary of State John Roberts told a Commons committee Thursday.

"There is an extremely discouraging trend in B.C.," he told the committee studying department financing of minority language programs.

The provinces will receive a total of $9 million this year for official language minority groups — up from $6.2 million last year — based on a formula negotiated with the federal government four years ago.

The amount to each province is based on the size of the minority group, the number of organizations and institutions working in the community and the demand for services.

Liberal MP Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier) argued that the criteria for the formula system favors Quebec, the most generous province when it comes to providing official language minority rights.

Anglophone groups in Quebec are highly organized and receive more money than francophones groups outside the province, Gauthier said.

"Other provinces are not that generous yet Quebec gets the lion's share."

Roberts said Quebec has not received more than five per cent of the total until this year.

"There has been a greater demand by anglophones in Quebec in the last 12 months because of the political uncertainty," Roberts said.

But he could not say how much money would go to anglophones in Quebec or francophones outside Quebec, or whether the money would be spent for language training.

Seeing a friend picking garden peas last year set me thinking. Could it be the method of picking that causes so many reports of pea vines wilting just after the first picking has been made?

A handful of vines were grabbed in one hand and the pods yanked off with the other. Rough teatment to say the least, especially for plants with stems so soft as those of a pea.

Examination showed the vines to be crushed at the point of holding, and badly creased or cracked above and below the held portion where the force of the pulling had the greatest effect. Also, some of the plants had been pulled loose from the soil which indicated the feeding roots had been broken.

Checking the planting a week later, the loosened plants were yellow from root to tip, and nearly all vines had wilted tops, dried flowers and withered pods.

No better advice can I give any gardener than that given repeatedly by an old-time market gardener. "Handle every vegetable, fruit, and flower as if it were the only one in the world, impossible to replace and beyond monetary value."

This may sound ridiculous when one has rows of peas, hundreds of apples, or a half-ton of potatoes, but there is another angle to consider.

Everything we produce in the home garden has cost us labor plus some outlay in cash, an investment on which we are entitled to a reasonable return. That is plain cold business.

When we plant a vegetable garden the return we are seeking is a product far superior to that which is mass produced for the market.

We expect high nutritional value and exceptional flavor because we are able to grow varieties too delicate to withstand the rough handling associated with shipping, and so tender that eye appeal quickly fades.

What is gained with a garden at the back door if we damage our plants when we pick, or damage the produce before it reaches the kitchen?

My friend laughed when I pointed out the damage to his pea vines, saying the mechanical pickers used on farms are not equipped with kid gloves.

This is quite true, but mechanical pickers lift, or pick, the entire crop at one time, whereas the gardener gathers enough for one meal and expects to gather more every few days as needed.

Fresh young peas, for example, can be enjoyed from late June until the end of September if frequently and carefully picked, and early, midseason and late varieties planted to give continuous coverage for this period.

Commenting on my friend's experience has caused many gardeners to ask how one can get the pods if you don't yank them off the vines.

Professional pea pickers have very strong thumbnails with which they sever the stem just beyond the pod. I had that kind of nail years ago, but not now, and I know many gardeners with nails too soft to sever plant fibres.

But I can still operate a pair of scissors or secateurs to cut the pod stems, and I'm quite willing to be considered a sissy providing my pea vines continue producing luscious green orbs and are not damaged by picking.

The same applies to beans, both dwarf and pole types. The dwarf bean plants are easily loosened from the soil and their feeding roots broken when beans are carelessly pulled from the plants.

Some gardeners seem to have no feeling whatever for plants. When commenting on a plant they will bash the foliage with their hands, or crush it in their fingers, at the same time asking what makes the leaves turn brown and wither.

Others damage beautiful shrubs and conifers with jets of water from a hose, seemingly to satisfy a youthful yearning to be a fireman.

Cucumbers, squash, and marrows are often twisted to get them off the vine, damaging the vine sufficiently to stop all food going to the younger fruits beyond. A sharp knife is the tool to use, severing the stem two inches from the end of the fruit.

Potatoes, beets, carrots, turnips, and parsnips, all bruise when roughly handled. Bruised tissues result in loss of a high pecentage of the nutrient contents for which the crops were originally grown. Rotting in storage is often the result of rough handling at harvest time.

Nutritional value is also lost when vegetables are washed at the time of gathering. It is best to leave a small amount of soil adhering to all root crops until prepared for use, and to delay the washing of leaf crops until just before preparing for the table.

The method used to gather tree fruits can cause problems in the future, when apples and pears are knocked from the tree with a long pole the fruiting spur usually remains attached to the fruit.

Since each fruiting spur will bear for 10 to 15 years, their preservation is important, otherwise less fruit will be produced until new fruiting spurs have formed and come into production.

In some instances we can conveniently combine picking and pruning in the home garden. Two accommodating plants are peaches and black currant.

Both produce their fruits on shoots made the previous year. Since these shoots will not bear again they can be removed with the fruit attached.

This method of harvesting makes it easier for the home gardener to remove the correct pieces rather than taking the wrong shoots later in the season; and the black currants can be removed from the cut-off twigs at leisure in the shade rather than bending over the bushes in the hot sun.

Unfortunately, the red and white currants, and gooseberries cannot be pruned at picking time because they all bear fruit on old wood. The new shoots must be pruned back in February or early March.

If it is worth while growing fruits and vegetables in the home garden, surely it is worth while handling the plants and their produce with the greatest of care so as to obtain full interest on our investment.

WORK FOR THE WEEK

As roses show color, fertilizer such as 6-8-6 can be given to established plants (not first year in good soil); one tablespoon to a plant, well watered in.

Plan for perfume in groups of annuals near sitting out spot — patio, balcony, sundeck — nicotines for evening, petunias for sun, pinks in sun, stocks for evening fragrance.

Sow sweet corn in short rows to form a block for wind pollination; sow more when this is three inches tall; and final sowing as first cobs are picked. Choose a dwarf growing variety.

Sow annual herbs for use all summer, and some for drying to use in winter: dill for leaves in salad and with many summer vegetables, sweet basil for its quite different flavor, and summer savory.

If tomatoes not planted out yet, prepare spaces for them by digging holes and filling with layer of old shredded and soaked newspaper (not colored sheets) topped with old compost and soil, top this with dry strawy material from the outside of compost heap.

Sow beets now, will not grow in cold soil. Frost has been registered at grass level on three occasions during past week.

Care with tomato, squash, pepper and eggplant before planting out will pay off with earlier fruit setting from stronger plants. They must not be making soft leggy growth; prevent this by placing them outdoors in direct sun and warmth during daylight hours.

Deep Cold Currents Packed with Power

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — One solution to some of the world's energy woes may lie within the deep, cold undercurrents of the oceans.

Scientists are busy preparing the way for ocean thermal energy conversion, a concept that would utilize the warm surface water and the cold water 1,000 or more feet below the surface to create a continuously operating heat engine — and a means to produce electrical power.

While different researchers envision different plants, the basic idea would be to run a fluid, such as ammonia, through a closed cycle system. The surface sea water would warm the fluid to a high pressure vapor, which would then run through a turbine and generate electricity. The turbine discharge would be fed into a condensor and cooled by the colder, deeper water, and the cycle would begin again.

Initial costs for ocean thermal energy development would be high, but proponents say the virtually limitless water supply and daylong, year-round operations could make ocean power the cheapest and most plentiful power available.

Further, like solar power, ocean power would not pollute.

Clarence Zener, member of a Carnegie-Mellon University research team working on the concept, and a pioneer in the field, says the idea first took seed in an article prepared by French physicist Jacques D'Arsonval in 1881.

But D'Arsonval's crude theories were just added to the stacks of undeveloped scientific theories until the mid 1960s when a group of Westinghouse Electric Corp. researchers, including Zener, took a fresh interest.

At first, Zener was discouraged by Atomic Energy Commission estimates that the cost of electricity would drop steadily, because of nuclear generation.

But when Zener moved to CMU in 1970 it was clear electricity costs were only going up.

Further discouragement came when the CMU team applied for a National Science Foundation grant, and, in Zener's words, "We left feeling as if we had been thrown out. They didn't even want us to leave a copy of our proposal.

"But you have to learn in this game not to be discouraged."

So Zener and CMU professors John Fetkovich and Robert Rothfus continued their research and are now narrowing the list of obstacles to full development of ocean-going ocean thermal energy conversion plants.

Zener would like to see 10 megawatt prototype systems in operation off the coasts of Puerto Rico and Hawaii by 1982, and said officials in the two areas were enthusiastic. Puerto Rico and Hawaii would benefit from OTEC development, Zener said, because they are too small for nuclear power plants and native fossil fuel deposits have been exhausted.

4 Top UVic Students Honored Today

Ralfs, of 5024 Echo Drive, completed a double major honor program and is the top student among 583 arts and science graduates with a grade point average of 8.85 out of a possible 9.

Ralfs is to receive bachelor degrees in both chemistry and mathematics.

Other awards received by Ralfs at UVic include the president's scholarship, B.W. Pearse scholarship and the Seaspan scholarship.

This year the National Research Council awarded him a $6,360 post graduate scholarship. He has been accepted at Cornell University and will pursue a doctoral degree in applied mathematics and theoretical chemistry.

RALFS

Ginette Raymonde Griffiths, 48, of Victoria, receives the UVic jubilee medal being presented for the first time this year.

Established by the 1978 graduating class, the award is given to the top graduating student in the bachelor of arts program. Mrs. Griffiths won the award with a graduating grade point average of 8.71.

At the ceremony today, Mrs. Griffiths was to be accompanied by her daughter Diane, who is also receiveing a bachelor of arts degree.

Mrs. Griffiths came to Canada from Paris in 1955 and went back to school after 26 years to enrol in UVic Russian and Spanish courses.

She achieved a grade point average of 8.33 the first year and kept almost perfect grades in the senior Russian and Spanish courses.

GRIFFITHS

Last year she was awarded the Spanish Government book prize as the best student. In June she will attend a Russian language workshop outside Leningrad as a student of the University of Waterloo.

Two other graduating students will receive the Maxwell Cameron memorial medals for outstandng achievement in the faculty of education.

Marion Yole of Victoria and Bill McGhee, formerly of Port Alice and now living in Vancouver, will receive the awards Saturday.

Yole, 24, achieved first-class standing in both the practical and theoretical phases of her work towards a bachelor of education degree in the elementary program while McGhee accomplished the same in the secondary program.

Yole and McGhee both plan to apply for B.C. teaching positions in September.

At the convocation, Chancellor Dr. Robert Wallace is to confer undergraduate and graduate degrees on about 1,150 students.

Law Grad Wins Gold Medal

The University of Victoria's new law faculty has produced an outstanding graduate, Emil Dmetro Chapelski.

Chapelski, a 33-year-old former bank manager, is the first winner of the B.C Law Society gold medal after three years of study at UVic.

He has been first in his class each year since the law faculty opened in 1975.

A graduate from the University of Alberta with a commerce degree, Chapelski joined the Bank of Commerce and worked in Toronto and Vancouver before coming to work at a Victoria branch in 1973.

At the age of 30, he decided to become a lawyer and went back to school while his wife Wendy worked in the accounting department at UVic.

"This degree was really a team effort," said Chapelski. "There is a lot of work in the law program but my family worked harder than I did."

CHAPELSKI

During his three years at UVic, Chapelski won the D.M. Gordon book prize, the Crease and Company scholarship, the J.L. Wilson prize and the Carswell prize.

In July he will begin articling with the Edmonton firm of Parlee, Irving, Hemming, Mustard and Rodney. His interests are corporate and commercial law.

Grassroots Scheme Flowers into Action

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — Half a century ago, when Dr. J. J. (Jimmy) Tompkins and Dr. Moses Coady started what came to be called the Antigonish Movement, they were trying to help impoverished fishing and farming communities along the Atlantic coastline overcome the agonies of the Depression.

A news release announcing celebrations this year marking the 50th birthday of the movement sums up what their efforts have accomplished.

"What began as a grassroots movement aimed at alleviating the plight of the farmers, fishermen and miners in Atlantic Canada has grown into a program of social action in the fields of adult education, co-operatives and community development that has spread to more than 100 developing countries."

Coady, the release recalls, "worked closely with people in "kitchen groups," studying, planning and finally building credit unions and co-operative wholesale and retail stores, fish and farm processing plants, marketing and distribution programs."

"Today, work . . . is focused on low-cost housing, self-help community economic programs in fishing and service industry among the native peoples, labor schools and pressure groups on government and industry.

"Overseas, the results have been even more dramatic. Through the Coady International Institute, founded in 1959, more than 2,000 men and women from every continent have learned the principles of group action and self-help as well as techniques of planning and management that they have applied in their own communities in virtually every country of the Third World. . . .

"Estimates of the numbers of people who have been affected by the efforts of Coady-trained graduates range from 15 million to 20 million."

Products of the internationally known economics department at St. Francis Xavier University include Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen and Rev. Andrew Hogan, acknowledged expert on the industrial Cape Breton area and a New Democratic Party MP.

Tompkins and Coady were criticized in some quarters as "communistic" and "provocative of class warfare."

At the same time, industrial and business giants were among their backers, notably Andrew Carnegie and his Carnegie Corp.

"Almost from the inception of this foundation in 1912, the corporation provided the financial means for Tompkins and Coady to put into action a people's school and a language program for the Acadian French."

Turning the seasons around on Australian slopes

Travel Tips

By STAN DELAPLANE

The snow is flying in the Australian Alps, where young blokes and their sheilas come to shuss all day and party all night.

Winter? That's because the seasons are reversed down under the Tropic of Capricorn.

Thredbo doesn't have gambling, as they do in Bariloche, up in the Argentinian Andes.

And it's probably not as well known as Portillo, on the Chilean side of the Andes.

Nor can you ski on glaciers, as you can in New Zealand.

But New Zealand, with its blue laws and starchy colonial attitudes, isn't a home from home for the swinging skier. And there's the language barrier and those secret police to worry about in Chile and Argentina.

Australians, on the other hand, could pass for home folks were it not for the neo-Cockney accent inherited from their jailbird ancestors who were transported here by the thousands in the 19th century.

Bronze skinned, not overly intellectual, outdoor nuts who could pass for the crowd at Laguna Beach. The difference is that here they surf and play tennis on Christmas, then head for the slopes when winter comes in June.

So if you're a non-Spanish speaking ski freak who also happens to have a bulging wallet, take heart.

You don't have to wait 'til next December to join a giant slalom, you can sprain an ankle in style here in the land of the koala and the kangaroo, where the beer flows as fast as it does in Bavaria.

(We're talking about real beer, like Foster's and Victorian Bitter and KB Gold. Beer the color of copper and with a bite to it, not the pale, almost tasteless stuff that passes for beer Up Over in North America.)

The Snowy Mountains, which is what Aussies call their Alps, are a mountain chain down in the southeast corner about 510 kilometres south and west of Sydney.

The mountains were first explored in 1865 by prospectors looking for gold.

To get to the gold country in wintertime, those prospectors had to use snowshoes.

Indeed, what's believed to be the world's first alpine sports organization was founded exactly a century ago, the Kiandra Snowshoe Club.

Thredbo has been a ski resort nearly 70 years. It's small and tidy, with a minimum of road traffic and a feeling of tranquillity. The real world seems very far away.

We're staying at the Thredbo Alpine Hotel, a lodge that looks as if it wandered here from the Tyrol.

Out the window we can see Mt. Crackenback and its three ski lifts snaking silently up the mountain.

Expensive — when are ski resorts not expensive? — but the food's good, the wine tasty and the ambience much like Squaw Valley. The same ruddy-faced young people zooming down the runs by day, then disco-dancing at night in a basement rathskellar.

A varied crowd, too.

On the same afternoon that an ambassador's daughter from Canberra pulled us out of a snowdrift we clinked beer steins with a college boy here on a cheap bus excursion.

Instructors come from many counries too — Austrians, Germans, even the odd North American.

Newfies beckon tourists

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. — Newfoundland's tourism department has outlined some new moves to boost tourism in the province this summer.

A department spokesman said a number of large billboards will be set up at major intersections of the Trans-Canada Highway with the aim of getting tourists on to secondary roads and into small coastal settlements.

The billboards will contain information advising tourists where to go, what to see and do and where to stay.

"Two information officers will also be employed by the department on each ferry crossing the gulf from North Sydney to Port-aux-Basques during the summer to further promote the attractions of the island," the spokesman said.

Canadian National's summer schedule indicated that the North Sydney-to-Port-aux-Basques ferries will operate up to four times daily during the summer months.

This summer's service to Newfoundland's east coast, from North Sydney to Argentia, will operate six days a week during the peak of the season and three days during the first two weeks and final two weeks.

The east-coast service begins June 16 and the last sailing will be Sept. 14.

Last year, the province had a major drawing card in the Canada Summer Games at St. John's, but despite the big event the number of tourists was disappointing and some motels and hotels reported better business after the Games when business and professional people came for conferences and meetings.

FARM HOLIDAYS

New Zealand's bridge to friendship

By JOHN PINKERMAN

PUKEHOU, New Zealand — This beautiful spread of rolling green hills, dotted with some of New Zealand's 60 million sheep, is about an hour's drive south of Napier.

It is the locale of Penlee Sheep Station, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Geoff Warren. If you are smart you will find a way to spend a day or several days on the Warrens' 1,000-acre ranch. These friendly parents of five children epitomize the hospitality of most New Zealanders and, in a sense, they are in the business of making new friends for their country.

The "business" is their participation in a loose program called Farm Holidays, a way to schedule part of your vacation trip in a New Zealand home. "It is no all-night drinking party," Warren said as he drove this visitor over part of his spread. "This is a working farm but it is part of our way of building bridges and helping to keep friendly ties with people from other countries.

For the visitor, a visit to Penlee, or one of dozens of similar sheep stations (ranches), is ideal for those who love the country (vs. the city), who appreciate the quiet, natural surroundings and, most of all, for those who enjoy the company of the people who populate this remote Southern Hemisphere nation.

The Warrens, perhaps, are people even beyond the calm friendliness of their countrymen. "You have the run of the house, so do what you want to do when you want to do it," Dinah Warren will tell you. She will cook you a bountiful breakfast and serve you a hearty dinner, and late in the day she may say, "The sun seems to be over the yardarm and doesn't that mean it's time for a bit of libation?"

Your drink will be one but it will be sufficient to generate all kinds of spirited conversation. Even Honey, the Warrens' Labrador, trained as a sheep dog, naturally, will join in the festivities as she begs a snack from you.

But, you cannot tarry too long because the Warrens are going to take you to a party at the home of one of their friends — a 25th wedding anniversary party. This normally would be a deadly imposition but not this time. What you encounter are half a hundred more tremendously friendly New Zealanders, and you get an even better view of life in this country.

It must be said that the Warrens get paid for boarding you, but guess what you get? As part of a government-encouraged people-to-people program they get the small sum of $13 a day to bed you down, feed you and serve as tourist guides around their ranch.

"Sure, we accept the money," Warren said. "Every little bit helps. But, obviously, we don't open our home just for the money. We love having North Americans here, and despite all the 'ugly American' business, we've never had anything other than wonderful guests."

Ending even a short stay with the Warrens of Penlee may cause you some sadness because it is a unique experience in uninhibited hospitality. However, don't fret too long because you are going to have somewhat similar experiences elsewhere in this country.

Unique kind of vacation is one at a New Zealand sheep or cattle station (ranch.) This spread has added vantage of spectacular view of Mt. Egmont.

A stay at Penlee is particularly memorably when it comes just after an overnight at an avertised super inn like Huka Lodge, a few hours north of here. Huka, near Lake Taupo, and a favorite of celebrities like golfer Jack Nicklaus, cannot compare with the simple elegance of Penlee — and of the Geoff Warrens. The Warrens are what New Zealand is all about.

Sentimental journey for romantics

ON THE GO
WITH JERRY HULSE

HONOLULU — And now for a few lines about Hawaii's romantic hideaways.

Beginning with a sentimental favorite, the list takes in small inns and resorts on Maui, Kauai, Lanai, Molokai and the Big Island itself — each exuding an individual charm and a particular reason for entering its name in the memory bank.

This is especially true of Hotel Hana-Maui which rates a special rave, just as it always has.

Low-rise and peaceful, Hana-Maui is a cluster of 55 single-story units set on 20 acres of this earth's loveliest terrain. A fellow writer once called it "one of the last outposts of The Great Unspoiled."

Amen.

THOSE who've been there will carry the memory with them forever. Although one is tempted to fly to this remote chunk of paradise, to do so would be a mistake; the drive is a inspiration.

While the road is narrow — twisting constantly — it's worth every confounded bounce. Climbing above the sea between Kahului and Hana, this is a drive of which dreams are made.

I TOOK this drive originally in a pink-striped Jeep, long before the road was paved. It was filled with ruts and near-dropoffs, hundreds of feet above the ocean. Never mind, though. What I saw made up for the small discomforts.

Moss and vine-covered mountains rose to pure white clouds. Occasionally rain fell and then the sun would shine again, creating still another rainbow.

Well, eventually we made it to Hana and Hotel Hana-Maui, which was everything we had been told it would be: A cluster of handsome cottages with shake roofs and a staff genuinely imbued with the notion of spreading the Aloha spirit.

IT IS THE haunting beauty of Hana's setting, though, which makes it special. Of Hana's Hamoa Beach, James Michener once wrote: "It is the only beach I have ever seen that looks like the South Pacific was in the North Pacific — a beach so perfectly formed that I wonder at its comparative obscurity."

Well, enough of Hana. On this same island there exists another resort worthy of mention, Jack Millar's Napili Kai Beach Club. It is beyond the old whaling village of Lahaina and storied Kaanapali Beach, down a country lane to a place where a rainbow sea washes against its shore. Like Hana, it, too, is low-rise and low-key and designed for relaxed Hawaiian living.

I HAVE neighbors who go there twice a year. For them it's a drug, a habit that's impossible to kick. This place I speak of is surrounded by palms and plumeria and orchids of every imaginable color.

Its reef-protected beach is one of the finest on any island on earth. Each morning guests gather there to drink coffee and to drink in the scene beyond. At day's end they turn to the House of the Maui Moon, sipping mai tais and watching the sun tumble behind the island of Lanai.

Lanai is Hawaii's pineapple isle, bought in 1922 by the Dole people. It is a place for romantics seeking total escape; as a result, few tourists bother to go there.

ON THE ENTIRE island only one inn exists, the little 11-room Lanai Lodge, a ramshackle affair that's reminiscent of Mary Pritchard's old Rainmaker Inn (now closed) in Pago Pago. Although a bit inelegant — the rooms are plain and the beds sag — obviously it's a bargain, costing only $17 a night single, $20 double.

Besides this, it has the only bar on the island.

Jeeps may be rented for exploring the pineapple plantations, and down at Shipwreck Beach great ghostly vessels are awash, abandoned to the elements. Elsewhere beachcombers gather Japanese glass floats that wash ashore with the currents.

ON LANAI there are peaks to explore as well as pleasant bathing at Hualupe Beach. Died-in-the-wool romantics will recognize the island's charms. For romance at its fullest I can think of few hideaways that compare with Kona Village on the Big Island. Kona Village is Hawaii's wedding and honeymoon capital.

Couples gather on the beach at sunset. The bride and groom march barefoot to the sea. By the time social director Kamanookaleo Okalani Beckley croons the Hawaiian Wedding Song there is not a dry eye in the entire village.

KONA VILLAGE is the ideal setting for the marriage ritual — a miniature Polynesia with thatched huts which provide king-size beds, sliding glass doors, refrigerators and hot showers.

Kona Village stands alone at the end of a great lava flow, surrounded by keawe and hau trees. The bougainvillea is a startling red and the ocean is the shade of laundered jeans.

FOR COUPLES with stars in their eyes there's a honeymoon package that includes wedding announcements, a cake, champagne, a picture album with photos of the ceremony, plus a four-day honeymoon in one of those thatched cottages. The tab figures out to $1,090 which, considering the cost of a wedding back home, isn't all that expensive.

Otherwise, the already-marrieds may settle in for as little as $130 a day, including breakfast, lunch and dinner.

On the same island, Don Hart's Keauhou Resort gets its share of raves — a cluster of one-, two- and three-level townhouses close by Keauhou-Kona golf course. Hart's colony features a couple of swimming pools, all-electric kitchens, washer-dryers, refrigerators, icemakers and color television sets. Rates for a couple start at $35 a day, with a five-night minimum. Only one snag here: no beach.

THE ADDRESS: Keauhou Resort Condominiums, 78-7039 Kam III Road, Kailua-Kona, Hawaii 96740.

And then there's Sheraton's new spread on the Friendly Isle of Molokai. Like Kona Village, it's both remote and peaceful. (If it's action you're after, scratch it from your list. Otherwise, this enclave of 34 one- and two-story Polynesian-style bungalows will do just nicely.)

In all of Hawaii, few resorts offer this brand of escape. No cars, no high-rises, no nightlife, no radios, no TVs.

Just the peaceful wash of the seas.

SPRINKLED across 29 acres, Sheraton's new hotel is surrounded by a championship 18-hole golf course on the shores of Keuhi Beach. Guests sail catamarans or paddle beyond the breakers in outrigger canoes. Figure on $41 to $49 a day for a single or $44 to $52 for a couple.

This leaves Kauai, Hawaii's Garden Isle. Just the other day I made a new discovery over near Poipu Beach, which is on the sun-blessed side of this lovely island.

I'M TEMPTED to keep this one a secret, but if you're a romantic, well — you'll learn about it sooner or later anyway.

It's called the Garden Isle Beach Apartments and Cottages. Thirteen units in all, they face a lagoon with sunsets like none found elsewhere on earth.

Robert Flynn and his wife Sharon are the innkeepers; they came to Kauai to escape the wet winters of Seattle. Flynn is a painter-sculptor, and so the cottages are hung with his pictures and his statuary is found in the gardens.

It's a setting which makes this little resort special. Accommodations are unpretentious, but for those searching for peace and privacy, this is the place.

Groceries can be bought close by at the Kukuiula Grocery, and there are several good restaurants in the neighborhood, the Beach House for one, which is right on the water.

Tempo in Munich

Beethoven rings next to beat

By PHILIP SOUSA

MUNICH — At least twice a year the name of West Germany's most lively and attractive city is on the lips of millions of people all over the world.

Come fall and the talk is about Oktoberfest, the hearty 16-day beer bust and fun festival which, despite its name, always starts in September.

Then, as the new year dawns, it's the masked, black-tie and costume balls and other pre-Lenten merry-making known as Fasching, or carnival.

Yes, millions everywhere know and talk about these two events which over the years have become synonymous with this gracious "village of millions" that is the capital of the storybook Bavaria. And millions do more than just chat: Last year six million revelers poured into Munich for Oktoberfest alone.

Fewer folks, however, know what goes on here during the misnamed off-season, the period between fall's king-size elbow-bending fest and Fasching. This is a time when the predominantly easygoing and friendly local burghers have their town practically to themselves, when cultural life is at its best, when shopping and sight-seeing tourists have gone home, and when the magic world that is Bavaria in the winter looms uncrowded and fragrant within view of the city.

I'm not alone in saying that in a country noted for the diversity and beauty of its landscape, for its rich cultural life and architectural treasures, as well as the variety and excellence of its tourist facilities, Munich and its surroundings rank second to none.

There's much here to warrant this popularity.

Take the people, for instance. Muencheners are more relaxed and gregarious than their cousins elsewhere in the land. They're friendlier. Their morning greeting is not a sharp "Guten Tag," but a warmer, kinder "Gruess Gott," or "God be with you."

Oh, yes, I've encountered a few rude types here, especially car drivers and waiters. As a rule, though, these exceptions turned out to be people born elsewhere, Germans and foreigners here in hopes of sharing some of the city's well-known financial might.

Munich also has great sights both old and modern to delight the eye of the most jaded world traveller. In a land where music is such an integral part of the whole, Munich and Bavaria could be called variations on a theme by castles, concrete, churches and cuckoo clocks. The tempo? From Beethoven to beat.

Munich is also bear gardens and superb museums. Modest student bistros and lavish discotheques, more than 400 nightspots in all. Concert halls and produce markets. An ultramodern subway and a very ancient Christmas Market which turns Marienplatz, the famous square of the Glockenspiel, into a huge showcase of enchanting nativity scenes crafted in wood by local artisans.

There's Schwabing, the quarter where you find most of the city's 30,000 students, as well as a rather wild assortment of cafes, pubs, restaurants and porno shops.

More so than any other spot in the country, this sort of Greenwich Village East is where you can best catch the pulse of Germany's youth these days. Spend some time in the Schwabing and any cliches you may harbor about these young people being a bunch of conservative, regimented and unbending types go out the window.

Taking of windows, go up to the top of the 300-foot tower of St. Peter's Church just off Marienplatz and chances are you'll see the Alps that guard such great nearby resorts as Garmisch, Berchtesgaden and Oberammergau. Stand on the observation platform of the 955-foot Olympia Tower and you might even see Austria, if not Italy.

Some of Central Europe's finest ski runs and resorts, it should be remembered, are within a few short hours from here.

There's more to Munich and Bavaria, of course, and most of it is yours to enjoy throughout the year.

Casino opening plugs Atlantic City

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Resorts International Hotel Casino is booked solid through Labor Day weekend as operators prepare to open the first legal casino here late this month.

The 798 rooms are booked into fall with prices depending on room size and view, said manager Anthony Rey—and the prices jumped 25 to 30 per cent to reflect the coming casino era.

Last week, Resorts officials began refusing telephone reservations and told callers to submit written "requests." But Rey said the hotel soon may discourage the written requests and instead suggest that callers get back in touch two weeks before they plan to come.

The rates for rooms in Resorts' main building, the former Haddon Hall, will range from $65 to $100 a night. Prices in the 237 rooms in the Chalfonte building across North Carolina Avenue will range from $40 to $60 a night, Rey said. An oceanfront room that once cost $65 a night will now go for $100, he said.

He said hotel officials are devising a "traffic control" system to prevent congestion in the lobbies and the casinos. There is space for about 800 gamblers at any given time, but Rey estimated nearly 3,000 sightseers might fill the casino at times.

Socreds on the March . . .in New Zealand

By J. C. GRAHAM

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — A political party which owed much of its early inspiration to Canada is making startling progress in New Zealand.

The spectacular advance of Social Credit is throwing the two-party system into disarray and there are suggestions that it holds the real balance of power.

Such claims might seem extraordinary in face of the fact that it has only one MP in the 87-seat House of Representatives and that only as the result of a byelection last February.

Yet such is the disenchantment of voters with the established parties—National (right of centre and the present ruling party) and Labor (left of centre and the governing party until 1975), that recruits are flocking to the Socred banner as the only viable alternative.

Several MPs have been elected on monetary-reform policies akin to Social Credit in the past. But until this year only one has succeeded under a Socred label and that for only one term.

Social Credit as a political movement has fought every election for some 25 years. Much of the impetus, at least initially, derived from the party's success in Canada.

Canadian experience was extensively quoted to advance the Social Credit cause and close contacts were maintained with Canada.

But the movement seemed to be stagnating as a minor party with only the most tenuous access to Parliament.

It received 11 per cent of the vote in the 1954 election. After that support declined to about seven or eight per cent. It reached a high of 14 per cent in 1966, when one Social Credit MP was elected, but after that backing slumped again to about seven per cent.

The turning point in Socred fortunes was the emergency of Bruce Beetham as a charismatic leader. Now 42, Beetham, a school teacher and teachers' college lecturer, became party leader in 1972. He failed in two bids for election to Parliament but in 1976 was elected mayor of Hamilton, one of New Zealand's major cities.

He is not an outstanding speaker but he has a handsome boyish charm and a winning smile, dresses smartly and has an engaging sincerity.

New Zealanders have been shocked and repelled by a series of allegations by both National and Labor politicians against the morals, life-tyle, sexual habits and business ethics of members of the opposing party.

Every such charge brings new adherents to the Socreds, who have meticulously kept out of the mud-slinging.

In February, Beetham ran in a byelection caused by the death of a National party member.

He converted a National majority of 1,756 votes in 1975 into a Socred majority of 1,335 and became the second Socred member evern elected to Parliament.

The intrusion of a third party into Parliament after a lengthy interval brought witticisms. Beetham, it was said, would hold Socred caucus meetings in a telephone booth.

But wisecracks have changed to alarm and bewilderment in the last few weeks.

Public-opinion polls show Socred support to be soaring at the expense of both major parties. Recent polls show Socred backing to exceed 20 per cent.

Spokesmen of both major parties have given urgent warnings on the fallacy of backing a third party.

There have also been suggestions that Labor and Social Credit might get together—even for a coalition with Beetham as leader of a merged group.

But in the present climate it seems unlikely the Socreds would countenance a deal with either established party.

Monetary reform and a changed approach to public debt feature the Socred program, but with far less emphasis than in the past. Nor are links with the Canadian movement stressed.

Social Credit appears as a centre party with liberal aspirations which claims to be able to solve economic difficulties which have defeated successive Labor and National governments.

A general election is due in November. Whether even Beetham will retain his seat is far from certain. He undoubtedly won his byelection on a protest vote with the knowledge that no change of government would be involved. The boundaries of his constituency will be substantially different in November and he will oppose a senior and respected cabinet minister.

Yet the recent Socred swing has been so massive that there might be major upsets in November. Social Credit has become the great imponderable in the New Zealand political scene.

UNION TALK UNWELCOME

BOMBAY (CP) — "There is no place here for labor organizations. You are all Communist agents who deserve to be thrown into the sea or executed."

These harsh words were spoken by an Arab government official to a group of Indian, Pakistani and other Asian workers employed on a giant construction project in the sultanate of Muscat and Oman in the Middle East.

The official was reacting to demands for regular working hours, overtime wages and better living conditions for the 4,000 people working on the project.

Several Indians have been asked to leave the wealthy sultanate at short notice on the charge of "inciting labor unrest."

Eruvat Shekhar, a 31-year-old Indian technician, told The Times of India, Bombay's leading English-language newspaper, that he was expelled for protesting regulations requiring workers to work up to 16 hours a day if labor contractors wanted them to do so.

The Times said it had also received complaints from Asians in other Arab sheikdoms about harsh working conditions for immigrants.

Tens of thousands of Indians, Pakistanis and other Asians have been recruited for industrial projects in the Middle East. Every month millions of dollars are being sent by the immigrants to their home countries, helping to boost the domestic economies.

Indian press reports allege that most of the Indians working in Arab sheikdoms are nothing more than "reasonably well-paid slaves and bonded laborers."

The Times recently reported that 2,800 Indian workers were sent to prison in Muscat and Oman when they protested non-payment of overtime wages.

Glamorous? . . . Not So

Washington Post

NICE, France — The secret world of croupiers has been put in the spotlight recently with a police probe here into an alleged $4.4 million casino swindle.

To the average person, a croupier is probably as much a part of the glittering exclusive world reserved for the wealthy few as the formal dressed player standing on the opposite side of the gaming table.

But casino staffers do not see themselves that way, and in defending themselves against the current scandal some of their other concerns have emerged.

Details of dishonest ploys that have come to light include accomplices who collect at roulette after the croupier skilfully switches their bets in the excitement as the ball falls. This swindle is known as the baron system. Winnings are split later with the crooked croupier. But such tricksters are the exception in the profession, the croupiers point out.

Recent police enquiries have also centred on charges of Mafia involvement in gambling here, with allegations that ransom money from the booming Italian kidnapping "industry" is being "laundered" in French casinos.

Marc Blondel, general secretary of the Force Quvriere (FO) union which represents 90 per cent of France's 38,000 croupiers, revealed at a European Croupiers and Casino Worker's meeting here that the staff are not entirely free from self-doubts about their chosen employment.

Croupiers are no more satisfied with their job than factory workers or sales clerks, Blondel said, but gambling exists and gives croupiers a chance to earn their living.

One of the main worries of French casino staffers at present is the gradual incursion of American-style automated gambling.

The most obvious reason is that modernization threatens their livelihood — their earnings come solely from tips.

But Blondel also pointed to more altruistic reasons.

The select atmosphere of casinos at present tends to keep away those people who cannot afford to lose, he argued.

But the American machines, where for example, blackjack games can be played in rapid succession on a television screen, would appeal to all social classes, including the poorest.

Another American innovation the profession is fighting is women croupiers. The union, while accepting the idea in principle, fears the market will be saturated.

Where earnings are concerned, croupiers are not nearly as wealthy as popular belief would have them, the union representative said. In the best gambling houses they may earn up to $1,400 a month. But some earn only about $600 a month, pay their own social security contributions and depend on the seasonal nature of the work, Blondel said

YOUR CITY WATCHDOG REPORT
Number 59 — Congratulations to Alderman Robin Blencoe for his efforts to get the Victoria Police Board to try the pilot project of team or community policing. Your City's Watchdog feels that this method of utilizing our City Police force is long overdue. Congratulations go to the developer who instead of demolishing a very well built home has preserved it at 1001 Terrace Avenue. Alderman John Hayes gets another Black Spot for not supporting Evening Council meetings in June. The City of Victoria appears to be the only City or Municipality in B.C. that has council meetings in the afternoon. Many thanks to Maarten, Art and Jack of the Dutch Bakery for their help with the birthday cake for my Mother's 80th birthday. Thanks go to Monday, Victoria Magazine for their interest in the City's Watchdog's efforts regarding city matters. If you would like further information regarding city matters please phone 383-6259. Your City's Watchdog C. Joe Richards. P.S. Your City's Watchdog wishes all Swiftsure Entries good sailing this weekend. P.P.S. Tory Swing Predicted Conditions are better for a Conservative revival in B.C. than at any time in the past 30 years, provincial leader Vic Stephens said Friday.

"This government is very vulnerable," he said in a speech to 50 party members at The Empress.

He said the new Social Credit party was brought together as a coalition to turn the NDP out of office.

"Let's not forget the main purpose they were brought together for no longer exists."

Stephens said the Conservatives could look forward to electing at least six members if an election is called soon and he urged members to be ready in case Premier Bennett decides to go to the people.

"Don't put out of your minds the possibility that we could still go to a provincial election this fall. All he (Bennett) needs is an excuse."

Stephens said the calibre of Social Credit candidates is low and the Conservatives would make an all-out effort to find superior people to run against them.

CHILD CENTRES STUDIED

Preliminary discussions are being held between three ministries to establish a grants policy for new child development centres, the executive director of government health programs said Friday.

Chapin Key told delegates to the B.C. Cerebral Palsy Association annual meeting in Victoria such grants are now considered without any clearly defined ground rules.

He said the discussions are being held between the ministries of health, education and human resources.

Key, speaking on behalf of Health Minister Bob McClelland, gave no indication that the government would increase its grants for the treatment of children.

He praised the 1,737 volunteers who last year contributed 101,200 hours of time and expertise assisting in programs to care for those with neuro-muscular disabilities.

Workshops Set

John Goodwin of New York will be in Victoria Wednesday, May 31, to conduct two movement workshops with a choreography emphasis in the gymnasium of the YM-YWCA, 880 Courtney.

The first will be held from 3:30 to 5 p.m. for students aged 14 to 17 years who are currently taking acting, drama or dancing courses and will cost $5.

An adult workshop will be held from 8 to 10 p.m. for those interested in dance or theatre, preferably with experience in either martial arts, yoga, dance, stage or fitness classes although these are not essential. The cost for Y members or Y instructors is $7.50 and for non-members, $10.

Goodwin has a masters in choreography and is an accomplished teacher, performer and choreographer. One of his most recent works is being performed by the Joffrey Ballet.

In 1977 he played the role of the king in the off-Broadway production of Roger and Hammerstein's Cinderella and on the west coast he did the title role in Little Abner, as well as the choreography.

Those wishing to take part in either workshop should register as soon as possible.

Gunman Ambushes Police

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — A police van carrying three town constables was ambushed by a gunman Friday night, wounding one of the policemen in the head.

Constable Max Sehl was in good condition in hospital today after fragments penetrated his head and neck. Constables Thomas Hastie and Emerson Blagdon, the driver, were not injured.

Police said the shooting occurred while the van was answering a false report of a fight on the waterfront.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish transaction. Pull together loose ends. Don't lose sale by lingering. State case, terms. Much is on your side, more than might be immediately apparent. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently — so does the number 5.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Relatives, home, family circle — these figure prominently. What seemed a crisis might prove a laughing matter. You can set tone by being optimistic. Visit, call, relative in transit — these are featured. Taurus, Libra and Pisces individuals are integral part of scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Check "loose change." Means it is foolish now to take money matters for granted. Element of carelessness — or deception — seems to be present. Check data, verify bills, statements. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently — so does the number 7.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Cycle high — display capabilities. Be forthright, take initiative, make personal appearances, stress originality, pioneering procedures. Love and money are part of scenario. You find outlet for creative energy.

IF MAY 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural teacher, intuitive, sensual, active, bright, flirtatious; you eat too much when excited and create digestive problems. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons play significant roles in your life. December could be a profitable, romantic, memorable month. The year featuers change, travel, variety — if single, you marry. If married, there could be an addition to family. You are charming, careless and have an insatiable curiosity.

Breaching the Wall: The Selling of Humans

By MICHAEL GETLER
Washington Post

BONN — The two buses rolled steadily at 60 miles per hour along the East German autobahn, heading west.

Inside each bus, 37 passengers sat silently. Just hours earlier they had all been "political prisoners" in jails throughout communist East Germany and no one yet dared believe, with certainty, that they were in fact being ransomed — set free for money paid quietly by the West German government.

A young woman passenger, a doctor, idly fingers the upholstery and chrome ashtray on the back of the seat facing her. The material was plastic but, she would later recall, it felt rich, like leather, not like an East German bus felt. It was then that she first believed it was real and she would soon be in the West.

Just before reaching the border, the bus pulls into a roadside rest area. Parked there is a shiny, beige-colored Mercedes-Benz automobile — perhaps the ultimate status symbol in West Germany but one that is never seen in the East with East German licence plates.

The owner gets on the bus — an urbane-looking, middle-aged man with glasses, wispy, light-brown hair, expensively tailored Western-styled clothes, a tell-tale heavy gold wrist-watch and a diamond ring. Though none of the passengers had ever met him before, they all knew who he was.

He is their lawyer, 53-year-old East German Dr. Wolfgang Vogel — one of the most intriguing yet private figures ever to emerge from the twilight world of postwar divided Germany into one of the most bizarre of modern businesses — the official, government-approved selling and trading of people.

In the past 15 years or so, about 14,000 people have been quietly bought out of East Germany jails by the Bonn government at a cost unofficially estimated at almost $500 million, mostly in hard Western cash but also in scarce products ranging from fruit to fertilizer.

Many of those ransomed are persons who have asked too often or tried too hard, to get out of a country whose exits to the West have been sealed since 1961 to all but old-age pensioners, athletes and critics of the regime. Some are dissident trade unionists or clergymen. Some have been caught trying to help others escape.

The average price for what one American intellignce agent once called "East Germany's greatest cash crop" is now about $35,000 per person. But to buy the freedom of a doctor or professor might cost as much as $75,000 while an ordinary working-man prisoner might cost about $15,000.

Only a tiny fraction are spies, and the important ones tend to be traded rather than sold.

In 1962, it was Vogel who stood near the Potsdam Bridge in Berlin while Soviet spy Col. Rudolf Abel and U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers crossed over in a swap he helped arrange.

On May 1, it was Vogel's beige Mercedes, this time with his wife at the wheel, that picked up American student Alan Van Norman — jailed for trying to help people escape — at a deserted East Berlin parking lot and whisked him through the city's dividing wall to the West while her husband was enroute from Washington with convicted Soviet spy Robert G. Thompson.

In between, there have been thousands of faceless others.

Most of them come out by bus. Some come in more dramatic circumstances, perhaps at night in the back seat of Vogel's familiar car, being waved through the barricades, tank traps, barbed wire and spotlights of one of the less-used Berlin Wall crossing points.

Even for hardened tourists, driving across the East-West border at night can still provide the inevitable comparison with spy movies, with high-booted police rolling mirrors under the car and shoving long rods into the gas tank to see if it is filled with gasoline or people.

For many years, the ransom operations were secret. They still are in many respects. But in the past few years, stories have leaked out and people have talked, though anonymously.

Most recently, however, the curtain of secrecy has ben raised much further with the publication here of the first book on the subject, Ransom — Human Traffic in Germany, by French television correspondent Michel Meyer, who has been based in Germany for six years.

Most importantly, Meyer's book includes a lengthy interview with both Vogel and his West German counterpart, lawyer Juergen Stange, made in December, 1976, that constitutes not only one of the rare times Vogel has talked for publication but is believed to be the last time he granted an interview.

It was the dramatic and highly publicized spy swaps that first brought even the shadowy image of Vogel to the attention of the Western public. But as the veil has lifted on his role in the ransoming of political prisoners, serious moral questions have been asked of both East and West German officials.

Vogel clearly is a clever man who occupies an extraordinary, perhaps unique, place in East Germany, is a close confidant of East German Communist Party chief and ruler Erich Honecker, has a permanent visa to move back and forth between East and West, and carries on additional sensitive chores in the West for the Honecker government.

He has survived in these East-West pursuits for many years where others are believed to have eventually either failed or defected and he has been honored by East Berlin for his efforts.

He obviously lives far better than many top government functionaries, has two daughters in Western universities — one of whom has an American diplomat as a godfather — and also seems clearly to have acquired some wealth.

But in recent years, publicity about ransoming has raised questions about Vogel's role in human slave trade and the grim business of selling people, jailed on what to Westerners are unjustified counts to begin with, for hard cash.

"Such statements hurt and anger me," Vogel told Meyer, "especially if I get attacked personally, called a playboy, a privileged person, and it is inferred that I have Swiss bank accounts. What I do, along with Juergen Stange, gets twisted and presented as conspiratorial. But I am convinced that we have done well for the citizens of both German states . . . both states have equally profited," an assessment Stange says he agrees with.

Vogel explains that to understand why payment for people is justified one has to understand the "political and Marxist process and attitude by which derelicts are judged in a socialist state. They are judged by the damage they caused to the social system and that of course is a thinking process foreign to all capitalistic countries."

In effect, Vogel argues that if it costs $75,000 to educate a doctor in East Germany who then goes and damages the socialist system and wants to leave, the state can rightfully ask to be reimbursd.

"The basic conception, that these derelicts can be compensated for materialistically, is the real, and the only, background of these exchange processes," he says.

Besides, he adds, "Our action also contributes to detente between East and West. Every spy, refugee or dissident whom we exchange means one less problem, one less bit of tension between the two German states."

"Who is normally better?" he asked rhetorically in an interview a few years earlier, "He who buys or he who sells?'

"Kennedy came here and said he was a Berliner and the Americans used to float balloons over the wall. But all of this achieved nothing. I, on the other hand, perform a humanitarian service by which everyone benefits."

Vogel, who is not a Communist Party member but describes himself as a Marxist and a humanist, estimates that all told, the barter business has touched the lives of some 20,000 people when reunited families are included.

Rebels Resume Attacks

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Despite sweep operations by the French Foreign Legion, rebel units today recaptured the railway centre of Mutshatsha in heavy fighting, French military sources said.

The sources said the rebels, who invaded Zaire's Shaba Province, captured Mutshatsha from defending Zairean army troops and were now consolidating their hold.

There was no direct communication, however, with Mutshatsha and the situation there remained confused.

Mutshatsha is 63 miles west of the mining centre of Kolwezi, where the Zaire government is attempting to resume mining operations that are crucial for the nation's economy.

Sirens wailed over Kolwezi calling workers back to the mines today to restart operations for the first time since the rebels invaded the town two weeks ago.

More Terror Bombs

ROME (AP) — Terrorist bomb blasts ripped through political party offices and other targets in Rome and three other Italian cities early today, police said.

Various terror factions, in anonymous telephone calls, claimed responsiblity for most of the attacks.

One caller told authorities the Red Brigades were responsible for the attacks in Sardinia, in the Mediterranean Sea off Italy's west coast. Police said they also were investigating right-wing extremists in connection with the attacks.

The Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terror squad, was behind the kidnap-murder of former premier Aldo Moro. The chief of the ruling Christian Democrat Party was abducted March 16. His body was found in Rome on May 9 after the government refused Red Brigades demands to trade Moro for jailed terrorists.

In Rome, a bomb today damaged an office of the ruling Christian Democratic Party, of which Moro was president. The blast set fire to a police car and the car of a Christian Democrat official. Authorities said a group called Proletarian Armed Formations, claimed responsibility for the blast.

Three other bombs damaged an office of the neo-fascist Italian Social Movement, the fourth-floor apartment of a right-wing activist and a cosmetics shop. There was no immediate word on who was behind those blasts.

In northern Italy, a blast in the city of Padua destroyed the parked car of an industrial executive. In Piacenza, six firebombs caused minor damage in the construction yard of a leftist co-operative where a worker fell to his death from a scaffolding Friday.

The car of a neo-fascist party official was firebombed in the Tyrrhenian port city of Leghorn.

WATERLAND ADAMANT ON TRANSFERS

No Tears Over Lost Jobs

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria will lose almost 250 jobs through decentralization of the forest service and Forests Minister Tom Waterland has no sympathy for local protesters.

"The function of this government is to provide good administration not populate the city of Victoria," he said in an interview.

He said he will begin the process of decentralization as soon as possible.

"The number (of transfers) has not yet been decided but it will be less than 300 — it might even be less than 250."

He said forest ministry experts have advised him to transfer out a number under 250 but he has not decided whether he will move more or less than the number suggested.

"All I can say now is that it might be less than 250."

Waterland said he has no time for local protests because he is determined to carry out a policy of decentralization.

"We have 800 people in my ministry working in Victoria — and how many trees are growing in Victoria?"

A number approaching 250 would be moved to various centres across the province, where a further decentralization would take place.

WATERLAND
. . . 'how many trees?'

The forest service currently operates in only six centres and this number would be greatly increased, he said.

"We are planning a full decentralization."

Waterland also criticized the proposal from Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber that the provincial government guarantee a job-for-a-job, transferring an equal number of people in for those who are moved out of Victoria.

"That won't work," Waterland said, "if we started moving people to Victoria from the Lower Mainland, what would the mayor of Vancouver say?"

Waterland said Victoria need not worry about losing status as the capital city.

"Victoria will always be the seat of government but we must be allowed to provide good administration for the province as a whole."

Waterland said he would try to cushion the blow of the transfers as much as possible.

A few of the 800 employees are nearing retirement age, he said, and when they leave the service, their jobs would be replaced in some other city.

This would have the effect of transferring jobs without transferring people.

However, this would apply only to a small number of the approximately 250 jobs involved.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young and Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier have both expressed concern about the payroll loss to Victoria.

Couvelier has asked for a job-for-a-job guarantee from the provincial government while Young has asked the government to provide figures on the net loss to the city.

Young said he was asking the government to provide numbers because of continuing rumors about additional jobs being moved out of the city.

Russians Ready For New Arms Talks

Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS — Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko declared Friday that the Soviet Union would be ready immediately after the signing of a SALT II accord to begin a new round of talks aimed at achieving "a substantial reduction" in nuclear arsenals.

U.S. officials said Gromyko's statement, made only hours before he was scheduled to fly to Washington for a crucial weekend of SALT negotiations, marked the first time the Soviets have publicly agreed that the goal of SALT III should be deep cuts in strategic armaments such as those proposed last year by President Carter.

Gromyko's address to the United Nations General Assembly's special session on disarmament was notably mild in tone, and observers speculated that the Kremlin may be becoming a bit apprehensive over reports of growing congressional pressure on the Carter administration to postpone conclusion of a SALT II accord.

Gromyko, who will be discussing the remaining obstacles to a SALT II agreement in weekend talks with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and possibly President Carter, said he felt "Possibilities exist for resolving the remaining issues . . .

"If we miss this chance, then in certain highly important areas we could reach a point beyond which any possibility of concluding appropriate agreements will be altogether nonexistent," Gromyko said. "Certain types of weapons which are being developed simply do not lend themselves to mutual control over their quantity or qualitative characteristics."

Gromyko added that immediately after signing the agreement which is now being prepared, the Soviet Union would be ready to enter into negotiations which should lead to "a substantial reduction, I repeat reduction" in strategic arms.

Many delegates, including several from the United Staes, felt Gromyko's address was relatively restrained in view of Vice President Walter F. Mondale's sharp criticism of the Soviet Union two days earlier for escalating the arms race.

As expected, the Soviet foreign minister repeated the Kremlin's call for a ban on the neutron warhead that has been developed by the United States, terming it "a particularly vicious and cruel means of mass destruction.

Error Foils Trollers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federal Court turned down on Friday an application by the Pacific Trollers Association to force the federal government to end its closure of the Swiftsure Banks fishery because the injunction application named a non-existent department.

Judge Alex Cattanach said an injunction in the name of Environment Canada Fisheries and Marine would have no effect because fisheries operations come under the federal department of fisheries and environment.

"How can I order an injunction against an officer in Environment Canada Fisheries and Marine when there is no such department?" he asked.

Lawyer Paul Fraser withdrew the injunction application but said later he would be back in court soon.

Snag Still There

HALIFAX (CP) — Canadian and United States negotiators made sufficient progress towards implementation of a reciprocal East Coast fisheries agreement to warrant further meetings July 6 and 7 in Boston, a federal fisheries spokesman, H. Douglas Johnston, said Friday.

Meanwhile, south of the border the U.S.-Canada fisheries dispute was bounced back to cabinet level Friday after more than six hours of talks by negotiators in Washington failed to bring about an agreement.

Details of the U.S. proposal were not disclosed, but it was believed to deal with some increased access by Canadian fishermen to U.S. West Coast salmon waters.

Canada has been pressing for extended access to U.S. West Coast waters as specified in the bilateral 1978 fishing agreement signed earlier this year, but not yet approved by the U.S. Congress.

The agreement said the enlarged salmon-trolling zone would be conditional on Canadian closure of the Swiftsure Bank fishery for conservation purposes beginning in mid-April. Despite U.S. requests for the closure, Canada did not fully close the bank until mid-May.

SLOW MORNING at Swiftsure. When starting time rolled around with no wind, unidentified member of crew of Night Moves decided best bet was to catch quick nap. Record 373 boats in Swiftsure and Juan De Fuca classics waited two hours and 40 minutes before getting off the mark at 11:40 a.m. If forecast of brisk westerlies materializes later, crews will be on the hop with only brief breaks for meals. Terrorist Strolls From Airtight Jail

BERLIN (UPI) — Two women terrorists posing as lawyers entered an "escape-proof" jail today, freed one of Germany's most wanted men and casually strolled out with him under the noses of patrolling police.

One police guard taken hostage in the meticulously planned raid at the Moabit prison was shot in the leg. The terrorists all escaped unharmed.

Police said there were either two or three accomplices involved but there was no confirmation they were all female, as originally reported.

The women, believed to be members of an offshoot of the Baader-Meinhof urban guerrilla band, freed Till Meyer, a 33-year-old convicted terrorist who was being tried on chrges of murder, kidnapping, attempted kidnapping and 10 bank robberies. He was described as one of Germany's most wanted men.

They also had planned to free Andreas Vogel, 22, one of five other defendants on trial with Meyer, according to Juergen Baumann, head of the West Berlin Justice Department.

Baumann said the two women used lawyers' identity cards to get into the prison and timed their raid to coincide with visits by Meyer's and Vogel's real lawyers.

Once inside, the women pulled out pistols and shouted to Meyer and Vogel to leave the unlocked cells where they were conferring with their lawyers.

Meyer ran free but a guard grabbed a pistol from one of the two women and locked himself in the cell with Vogel. He sounded an alarm that alerted guards in the prison but not the police patrols outside.

The two women then took another guard hostage and forced other guards to open a security door that led to an unguarded front door.

"To show they meant business they shot their captive in the leg," Baumann said.

The plot was so carefully planned and prison controls so lax that the two young women then simply strolled out of the prison's main entrance onto a busy thoroughfare under the eyes of police patrols, got into a Volkswagen bus with waiting accomplices and drove off without undue haste.

The bus later was found abandoned not far from the prison.

The prison had been billed as "escape proof" after undergoing a $2 million renovation.

Meyer's and Vogel's real lawyers were taken into custody and questioned to see if they were involved in the plot.

Meyer was on trial on charges of being involved in the 1974 murder of Berlin Judge Gunter von Drenkmann.

DOCK RAMMED, GAS SPURTS

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A British coal carrier rammed an oil company loading dock on the Mobile River, sending about 100,000 gallons of jet fuel, oils and gases spurting out of severed dock pipes, the U.S. Coast Guard said today.

Lieut. Robert Trescott of the coast guard's marine safety division said the shipping industry was shut down for eight kilometres along the river because of the danger of an explosion from the highly volatile jet fuel and gases.

"Because of the muggy weather and the fuel lying low and collecting in pockets, there is some danger of an explosion and fire," he said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Spy Report Held

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's security advisers have ordered that secret documents arising from a 1946 royal commission dealing with Russian spies in Canada be withheld from public view for at least 10 more years. See story on Page 3.

Cables Cut

TOKYO (AP) — Railway communication and signal cables were cut near Tokyo's new international airport at Narita early today, disrupting the transportation of jet fuel to the airport for several hours, authorities said.

Riots Quelled

NEW DELHI (AP) — Police used tear gas and beat rioters with clubs to quell disturbances in India's two largest cities, Bombay and Calcutta, authorities said today.

'Mesrine' Strikes

DEAUVILLE, France (UPI) — A gunman claiming to be Jacques Mesrine, the dapper convict and ladies' man who staged a spectacular prison break three weeks ago, robbed the elegant Deauville casino of $30,000 early today and escaped with an accomplice in a blaze of gunfire.

Airport Safety To Wait

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seven British Columbia airports which do not meet minimum fire safety standards set by the Ministry of Transport may remain underequipped until new firetrucks are delivered to several major Canadian airports.

Thirteen $300,000 firetrucks were ordered by the federal government five years ago — but the Toronto company building them went bankrupt.

A spokesman for C.D.N. Research and Development Ltd., of Toronto, which now is building the trucks said Friday it may take a year to complete all 13 firetrucks.

The new, 60,000-pound firetrucks will go to Canada's major international airports to replace older fire-fighting machinery, which in turn will be passed on to smaller airports.

In Ottawa, a spokesman for the MoT said "the bottom line in all this is cash — and in this period of restraint it is not always forthcoming."

"But we are meeting the requirements as fast as we can with the funds available," the spokesman said. "The first of these new firetrucks is going to Toronto airport. I have no idea about the priorities of the others."

BIKER KILLED

A 19-year-old motorcyclist is dead after a collision between his bike and a sawdust truck in the 5700-block Sooke Road at 12.45 a.m. today.

Colwood RCMP said Stanley Robert Humphreys died in Victoria General Hospital at 5.15 a.m. from injuries received in the mishap.

The truck driver was not identified and no other details were released.

SUNDAY BIBLE PLAY BANNED

By FRANK RUTTER
Times London Bureau

LONDON — A British trade union is trying to ban the Bible on Sunday.

This extraordinary demonstration of union power comes from Equity, the actors' union.

One of Equity's members, stage star Alec McCowen, has memorized the gospel according to St. Mark.

He is currently reciting it — and acting it — at London's Mermaid Theatre, a two-hour performance which critics have termed a tour de force.

He is doing it on Sunday as well as weekdays.

But the show is to move June 20 into a West End theatre, The Comedy.

This requires a new contract between a new impresario and Equity.

Equity, refuses to allow the Sunday performances, says Nicholas Salmon, managing director of H.M. Tennent, the new impresario.

"It is rather ironical," said Salmon with British understatement.

"We had asked for this to be considered a special case, because of the nature of the subject. But they have been adamant."

To make matters more ironical, he continued, Equity has just permitted an exception for two of Britain's most popular comedians, The Two Ronnies, to put on six Sunday performances at the London Palladium.

"It doesn't matter that it's St. Mark's gospel — the point is that it is a Sunday performance," said Monica Foot, speaking for Equity.

"It is true that last Tuesday Equity decided against the application. The whole matter will be reconsidered at next Tuesday's council meeting."

Rail Link Stays but Bennett Rapped

Times News Services

Residents of Fort Nelson threw a party Friday night to celebrate the decision to retain and upgrade B.C. Rail's extension from Fort St. John, but Mayor Andrew Schuck took time off to blast Premier Bill Bennett for "waffling" for five months before making the announcement.

Schuck said that while he was happy with the announcement, the government took too long to make a decision on the rail extension.

Bennett announced on Friday a $35 to $40 million upgrading of the 400-kilometre rail link between Fort Nelson and Fort St. John, despite an earlier royal commission recommendation that the extension be shut down as too costly.

The announcement touched off celebrations in the northeastern B.C. community of 4,000 which had feared loss of jobs and the end of the town without the rail link.

Schuck said when the government tabled the commission recommendation, it created a lot of problems for his community.

He said hotel and apartment construction and homeowner loans were held up awaiting a decision on the rail link.

"I believe the premier (Bennett) was not being entirely frank when he said he needed time to study the over-all transportation system before making a decision," said the mayor.

"Now he's made the decision, but where's the integrated transportation policy? The government plainly was perplexed as to what to do with this extension and was buying time."

Bennett earlier denied that the government had been delaying its decision following the commission's recommendation, saying "it would have been improper" to immediately disregard its suggestions.

He noted that one of the commission's observations "was that too many decisions have been made without full study."

The premier said he expects the federal government to share 50 per cent of the cost, a proposal being discussed in federal-provincial talks on the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline.

The extension is necessary to reinforce government policies of economic expansion and northern development, which are part of the "economic blueprint" of the province, said Bennett.

He added it is also needed to serve the communities of Fort Nelson, Fort St. John and other communities in

Block Parents Wanted

max low

And so to the second of my wish-I-didn't-have-to-write-them pieces.

This one concerns Block Parents and being an idealist and never very realistic, I wish there was no need for such things.

But there is a need, I'm assured. And right now as far as the Block Parents program here is concerned, that need is twofold.

Block Parenting is a community-run program that has the blessing of police departments and most schools. The idea is to give children who are lost, sick, hurt, being bullied by older children, attacked by dogs or in danger of being molested, a safe haven. They go to the nearest home displaying the Block Parent sign in the window and are helped by an adult.

The children do not go to a Block Parent home, though, for food, toilet facilities, transportation or first aid.

Block Parenting began in London, Ontario, in 1968 following a couple of bad incidents there involving children. Today there are 6,000 Block Parents in that city.

Organizers here tell you there is a great need for such a program.

"It's always hard to get figures on child molesting as so many incidents are never reported," explains Anita Nute, Block Parent chairperson for Saanich.

'Yet when we go to schools to talk on the program we always have five or six parents come up and tell us of things that have happened to their children."

In areas where it has become well established, Block Parenting certainly seems to act as a deterrent. In the year before Block Parents moved into Sarnia, Ontario, for example, there were 45 reported attempts to pick up children. Now that figure has dropped to three.

"For one thing," says Anita, the mother of three small children, "the sign itself is a deterrent. It deters the molesters from coming into a neighborhood. They know someone is looking out, keeping a watch."

Even those who don't go to school yet seem to sense a feeling of security.

"We had one little boy below school age who was lost just a couple of blocks from where I live," explains Anita. "He couldn't read but he went to a Block Parent house because he saw the picture in the window of a woman holding a child's hand."

There is a need, says Anita, for more Block Parents everywhere here.

"Roughly, there are about 200 in each of the six areas giving us a total of about 1,200," she points out. "But they are very thinly spread in some parts and we need a lot more."

It costs nothing to be a Block Parent as local service clubs — in Saanich it's the Kiwanis — sponsor the program. And you don't have to be at home a certain number of hours a day to qualify as a Block Parent.

"You simply put the sign in your window when you are available and the rest of the time — like when you're at work — you take it out," Anita says.

And, contrary to popular belief, you don't have to be a parent to be a Block Parent.

But people who apply are very well screened.

"This is one thing all the kids in the schools ask: will the person's house I go to be safe?" says Anita. "Kids have a big fear of being kidnapped, probably because of all the headlines in the papers and the stories on TV."

Ideally, the organizers would like two or more Block Parents in each block in all the areas.

"Sometimes now we have only one in a block or maybe even one in a whole street," she explains.

Anyone interested in becoming a Block Parent can contact their local police department, which has a list of the organizers' phone numbers.

"Every area needs more volunteers," Anita says earnestly. "Just because there's one sign in your block it doesn't mean we don't need you!"

Chopper Trip Was Goosebump Giver

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Terrific view of the Swiftsure this morning through the open door of a helicopter.

Cold. Make that very cold. But terrific.

So much to see it was tough deciding where to look. Best place not to look was straight down.

At 9 a.m. the press climbed aboard an Okanagan Helicopter for a 20-minute ride over the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

He did say, however, the helicopter carried 13 passengers.

We had liftoff at precisely 9.04 a.m. from the helipad near the Johnson St. bridge. We circled over the breakwater and out over the strait.

For the convenience of press and TV photographers, the doors were opened on both sides of the craft, providing all passengers with a splendid view — and at the same time creating a superb cross-wind.

Make that hurricane. My new hairdo is a mess.

There was a good crowd down on the waterfront along Beacon Hill park, despite the cloudy skies and the threat of drizzle.

The crews were gaily bedecked in yellow rain slickers and on one pass we went low enough to see faces.

Our pilot, however, stayed far enough to the side to avoid hitting the boats with a downdraft.

There are few thrills in life quite to match the moment when at 500 feet someone flings open the door of a helicopter.

Knuckles turn white, and not just because of the cold. There is a tendency to grab on to anything that's bolted down.

Still, the only way to see what's happening is to lean towards the opening. And after the first few minutes, the feeling of excitement replaces the fear and there is the danger of becoming too casual about the open door.

The occasion, besides the start of Swiftsure, was the beginning of transportation week in Victoria, sponsored by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

And Steele on behalf of Okanagan Helicopters said his company would like to provide a regular helicopter service between Victoria and Vancouver if approval is granted and the service is economically viable.

"We would like to operate a 28-seater which could be in Vancouver in 30 minutes," Steele said.

"But there are a lot of agencies involved in this decision — and a lot of competition."

Steele was referring to Ottawa's financial support of Short Takeoff and Landing airplanes as well as the existing services of seaplanes and land-based planes.

"We could be in operation in one year if we get approval from the various agencies," Steele said.

Chamber vice president Bob Wheaton said the chamber hopes to see the service established because any additional transportation link will be beneficial to the community.

Phys Ed Teachers Hold Session Here

More than 360 physical education teachers from all parts of B.C. will attend a three-day physical education conference in Victoria June 8-10.

The conference, sponsored by the University of Victoria, will be held on the UVic campus and in two elementary schools.

One aim of the conference is to improve the teaching of physical education in primary grades where teachers often have only minimal training in physical education.

"These teachers have a key role to play," says Dr. John Jackson of the UVic faculty of education.

"The seeds of lifestyles are sown in the early grades and if the teaching of physical education is not done properly, children can become discouraged about participating."

Jackson, who is the conference program organizer, said there will be major workshops at the secondary school level.

RETIRING CHIEF OPENS FIREHALL

Gains retires June 2 after 32 years service.

The 4,000-square-foot building, which contains officer's quarters, a reception area, control room and training areas, replaces the hall on Hamsterly.

An ambulance will he stationed at the new hall to provide 24-hour emergency service for the Royal Oak area.

Board Rapped By Librarians

School board policies are forcing teacher librarians out of elementary school libraries, a spokesman for the Greater Victoria School Librarians Association said today.

Gary Rupert said the association has fired off letters of complaint to both Education Minister Pat McGeer and the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

"Elementary school librarians are being told to take teaching jobs or resign," Rupert said.

He said next year there could be as few as four full-time librarians in the elementary school system here. At one time there were as many as 24.

The association met Thursday and decided to make their problems public after months of wrangling with school district officials over the state of affairs.

He said the school board's concern over class sizes has forced principals to make drastic cuts, such as library and music, from schools.

He said the board's calculation of teacher-pupil ratios is artificial because all administrators and specialized teachers are included.

Rupert said Superintendent Ken Staples informed the association a month ago that while the school board sets the teacher-student ratio, principals have sole discretion on size of classes.

Rupert said principals are faced with the dilemna of chosing between special programs or small classes.

Some principals are getting around the problem by hiring library aides, but Rupert charged that is a direct contravention of BCTF policies.

"They've been cutting back on this and cutting back on that. Everyone's living in fear of his job.

Teacher Discord Reports 'Untrue'

Reports of discord among teachers in Victoria's Catholic school system are unfounded and untrue, says the chairman of St. Andrews elementary school board.

Dr. W.G. Krutzmann said he has received no indication teachers are unhappy with negotiations for salary hikes expected to be made when the provincial government begins funding independent schools in September.

His comment came after the Times learned some first year teachers at the school are so upset over the promise of small salary increases they are threatening to quit.

Krutzmann denied there are any difficulties.

"There've been no problems with the negotiations or otherwise," he said.

He added however there has always been a struggle with subsidies and fees in allowing boards to give a fairer salary.

At present, first year teachers at St. Andrews receive $650 a month.

If they stay on next year they'll get $750 a month and the maximum is $1,000 a month.

"What we've always gone on is the good faith and dedication of the people involved," Krutzmann said.

He said his school board and those of the four other Catholic boards in the Greater Victoria area are cautious about announcing salary increases at this time.

Some reports indicate the government subsidy will be in the order of $400 to $500 a student.

"But we'll have to wait until we get the government support and take it from there," Krutzmann said.

He said the government won't spell out the amount of aid until late August or September and the money won't actually reach the boards until January.

"We still have to base our budget on the current fee schedules," he said.

Meanwhile, Education Minister Pat McGeer says he will not enter into the current pay dispute between teachers at Roman Catholic schools and their employers.

The controversy arose earlier this week when teachers in Vancouver complained that money coming from the provincial government under the new Independent Schools Support Act will be pocketed by the churches instead of going to increase salaries and reduce tuition as intended.

A Vancouver archdiocese spokesman said salaries for teachers at Catholic schools will be increased by up to 45 per cent because of the new funds, but teachers say most increases will be much less.

Catholic school teachers earn from $6,000 to $10,000 now, about half what their counterparts in the public school system earn.

"The teachers must solve their own problems with their employers in these independent schools," McGeer said.

"Certainly, the last thing the government would do would be to interfere with employer-employee relationships in an independent school."

There are between 800 to 900 students attending Catholic Schools in Greater Victoria, with about 230 at St. Andrews elementary and 40 more enrolled at St. Andrews high school, which has only been going for two years.

Winnipeg Escaper Nabbed

He will face charges of escaping and being unlawfully at large from the Headingly institution.

A Colwood RCMP spokesman said police officers were at the home interviewing the parents when the suspect drove into the driveway.

Steigenberger spotted the officers and ran off into nearby bushes.

The RCMP dog team was brought in and within an hour tracked down the wanted man who.

Police said Steigenberger surrendered without struggle.

Health Officer Urges Play Area Dog Ban

He made the statement after revealing that a Salt Spring Island man is recovering from the rarely-diagnosed disease toxocariasis.

Humans, mostly children, become infected through the faeces of cats or dogs, usually by eating contaminated soil.

The unidentified Salt Spring Island man is believed to have caught the disease by eating unwashed carrots. Arneil warned that fruit and vegetables that may have been in a contaminated area should be washed before eating.

Though it is rarely fatal, Arneil said the disease can cause lung, liver or central nervous system symptoms.

Arneil said animals should be kept away from parks, beaches and children's play areas as much as possible to lessen the chance of infection.

The infected soil contains larvae which, when eaten, can burrow through the human intestine to reach the liver and lungs and, from these, any organ of the body.

Arneil said the larvae could reach the back of an eye, destroying sight.

He said there is no cause for panic but he reported the case because where one has occurred there could be more.

He said the symptoms are hard to spot. In the case of the Salt Spring Island man the disease had been detected by blood tests.

Arneil urged owners of cats and dogs to regularly deworm their animals, especially when young, and control what they eat by preventing them from roaming and foraging.

HEATHCLIFFE THE MOOCH

He's Fat, Saucy And Famous

Yes, Virginia, there is a Heathcliffe.

And he's a real seagull — as well as being the newly-adopted symbol of the Visitors Information Centre.

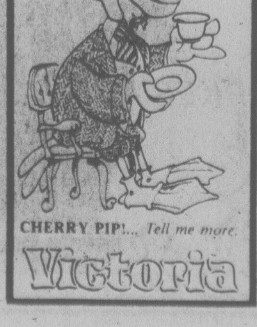
"We noticed people feeding them and we particularly noticed the largest seagull who was big, fat and saucy."

She said one day she talked to several women who were feeding the birds and discovered the seagulls had been given names.



We're a little bit British Guv'...
TEA ANYONE!
CHERRY PIP!... Tell me more.
Victoria

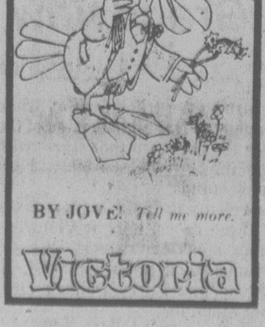
"I was told the biggest one was Heathcliffe, the smaller male was Spike and the female was Gertrude."

This happened at the same time the visitors bureau was looking for a symbol and Heathcliffe was adopted.

"It's a British-sounding name, you see, and it follows the theme of Follow the Birds to Victoria. It was ideal."

The caricatures of Heathcliffe are by local cartoonist Nelson Dewey.

The plan is to have a Heathcliffe sketch on tourist press releases and to use him in a variety of other ways like Heathcliffe buttons and tee shirts and as a parade mascot.



We're
BLOOMIN' LUVERLY...
BY JOVE! Tell me more.
Victoria

"We want him to be in parades. Heathcliffe will become our big bird and he should be a hit with the kiddies."

Meanwhile, Heathcliffe, the real seagull, continues to rule his Causeway domain and perch on the tourist bureau's flagpole.

He is described as being grey and very big, almost twice the size of the other seagulls.

Embroidery Traced Back to 1000 BC

KNIT& CHAT

Just recently I had to do some research on embroidery and a fascinating story unfolded which I though I would pass on. Many of you write and tell me how interested you are with the history of the various crafts.

Like other crafts, no one can say when embroidery was invented, where or by whom. It was being done centuries ago. In Egypt, carvings and paintings, especially those in the tombs, show that garments, couch covers, hangings and tents were decorated with embroidery, and since even foreigners are portrayed in ornate clothes, the art of embroidery must have been developed in other countries as well.

The Old Testament books of Exodus and Exekiel mention gold plate and wire, similar to that being used today, as being worked on fine linen in rich colors for ceremonial garments. Embroidery is thought to have been worked in China as early as 1000 B.C. and mention is made of these traditional garments in writings of 600 B.C.

Quillwork of the North American Indians and the decoration of barkcloth by African tribes may also represent primative origins of embroidery. The dry climate of Peru has preserved some woollen embroideries which are credited with belonging to the Inca period immediately preceeding Cortes' invasion of 1519.

The different styles in which this art of embroidery was executed depended on the materials available and the local culture, evolving in different parts of the world.

The Bayeux Tapestry is an amazing example of embroidery which was worked around 1100 A.D. and can still be seen today in a small town in Normandy.

I have seen this particular piece and it is an enlightening work of art for its time as it records the landing in England of William the Conqueror and the Battle of hastings in 1066.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am so upset I hardly know how to start this letter. While straightening up my teenage daughter's room, I came across a letter from a friend of hers in another state. I read it, partly out of curiosity, and partly to determine if it was something that could be discarded.

I was horrified at the filthy language, and also at the girl's delight in having found a theatre that shows only dirty movies!

This letter also described family possessions and "vacations," but Abby, I know the girl's parents and correspond with them, and this girl was writing lies.

What should I do? Now I suspect that my daugher must be responding to these letters in equally filthy language, and since this girl is my daughter's best friend, I must assume that my daughter's tastes run toward dirty movies, too.

Don't these kids know that filling their minds and mouths with garbage will do them no good?

Should I write to this girl's mother and tell her to talk with her daughter? Should I talk with my daughter and tell her what I've learned? Or are we to late to shape our children's morals once they've reached their teens?

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: If you have done your best to shape your daughter's morals, you need not consider yourself a "failure." Some teenagers feel "big" and grown-up using gutter language, exaggerating and even lying a little for effect, but that doesn't mean they are "no good." If they have been properly brought up (and even the best-reared children sometimes go through this stage), they will outgrow it.

At the appropriate time, subtly warn your daughter that mucking around in the lower registers of speech and entertainment can be habit forming. In the meantime, keep the avenues of communication open between you and your daughter, and don't shake her confidence in you by letting her know that you were snooping. You were, you know.

DEAR ABBY: How does a father who has excelled in sports all his life adjust to a 14-year-old son who has never shown even a normal interest in sports?

I realize that not all boys can be great athletes, but my son has the build for it, and the co-ordination, too. He could be really good if he wanted to, but he's lazy, and he isn't competitive in anything.

I have done my best to get him interested in sports ever since he was old enough to hold a ball, Abby, but it never caught on. Believe me, it's not easy to be a good father to a boy like this. Any suggestions?

SAD DAD

DEAR DAD: Yes, lay off. A "good" father forgets himself and thinks of his son. He then encourages the boy to grow in the direction he seems inclined.

It is usually the sum total of minor things that make the difference in the look of a knitted garment.

The leaflet How to Know a Good Garment offers dozens of helpful hints. For instance, when you cast on, leave a length of yarn long enough to sew up the seam. Leave another length of yarn when you cast off after completion of your work.

When you join a new ball of yarn, always join at the edges of the work where the seams will be. If you use a circular knitting needle, splice the yarn carefully when you make a join.

The leaflet also recommends that the ribbed border of any garment should be firm but elastic. To achieve this, use needles two sizes smaller than those used for the body of the garment.

Before you start a garment, knit a small sample piece in stocking stitch. Measure this carefully. If you are getting more than the number of quoted stitches per inch, try a larger size needle.

If you want to alter the size of a garment, adjust the tension. A difference of half a stitch per inch usually makes an over-all difference of one size in the garment.

With your request for the leaflet How to Knit a Good Garment, please enclose a large (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Patons and Baldwins (Canada) Ltd., 1001 Roselawn Ave., Toronto, Ont.

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	You will probably not see things as they really are, and this could hurt.
11-15 Positive Cycle-	A fellow worker or friend needs your help. Now's the time to provide it.

On low emotional days, try taking a break. Movies are better than ever these days and I make a point of going as often as possible. Good movies help me to forget about the "real world" for an hour or two. They help me to turn off and tune out, something I believe we should all do from time to time. As soon as you finish reading this, turn to the entertainment pages. Pick a good movie and have that well-earned break.

Dangerous. . .to the Fly

Dr. Frank Miller

The Wonderful World of ANIMALS

DEAR DR. MILLER: I couldn't believe my eyes the other day when I saw Goldie, my canary, snatch a little fly off its perch and swallow it. I read that canaries, being seed eaters, don't often do that sort of thing. Is it dangerous? — C.F.

DEAR C.F.: Only to the fly . . .

DEAR DR. MILLER: I read an incredible story about elephants who bury their dead and guard the graves. Are these true facts? — D.T.

DEAR D.T.: The "facts" may be padded a bit around the edges but basically there is something substantial to them. For example: Elephants do form strong bonds and when friend or relative dies the survivors do mourn. An elephant may on occasion cover the deceased friend with branches or dirt but grave-digging is not consistently practised. A passed-away pachaderm is often guarded by a close friend or relative but the pressures of daily living make such periods of devotion to the departed comparatively brief.

DEAR DR. MILLR: I just discovered an advantage to having your pet rat white. It's easy to find fleas on him. Two of them. I killed them both and was happy. For a minute. Then suddenly it struck me. Rat fleas carry bubonic plague, don't they? Am I doomed? I don't feel like it yet. Mother says if I get any kind of ache or pain I have to go to the doctor and can't wait for your reply. But I thought I'd write anyway. — V.A.

DEAR V.A.: Point one: Bubonic plague rarely dooms human victims who get proper medical treatment early. (2) Since pet rats rarely come in contact with wild rats, any fleas a pet might acquire would not likely be plague transmitters. (Most pet rat fleas come from cats or dogs.) Obviously, a newly acquired "pet" wild rat would be a horse of another color and its fleas could be dangerous carriers.
